Congress may raise its pay

WASHINGTON (AP) — A lameduck effort is brewing for congressmen to vote themselves a pay raise of up to $15,900 and to boost salaries for other top federal officials.

Staff proposals disclosed Tuesday by Rep. H. R. Gross, R-Iowa, would boost congressmen's present $42,500 a year pay to between $55,400 and $58,400 by 1977.

Gross said the effort is obviously planned during Congress' lameduck session, which starts next week, in what he called "an almost incredible, unconscionable move at this moment."

Chairman Gale W. McGee, D-Wyo., of the Senate Post Office Committee confirmed pay raise proposals have been drafted but suggested no effort will be made to put one through Congress unless President Ford leads the drive.

McGee said through a spokesman he thinks a pay raise for congressmen, federal judges and agency supervisors is needed, particularly by 9,000 to 10,000 supervisors whose pay is now frozen at $36,000.

But he said in view of the Senate's rejection in March of proposed pay raises, including a hike to $52,800 for congressmen, it would be useless to make another try unless Ford asks for it.

"There's no use going through another bloodbath for nothing," said the McGee spokesman. "We're going to have to meet with the President and see if something can be worked out."

But Gross said it would be an outrage for congressmen to vote themselves and other top officials a pay raise while Ford and Congress' Democratic leaders are declaring war on inflation.

Another Iowa Republican, Rep. Bill Scherle, called the proposals a "blueprint to fleece the taxpayers' pockets."

Gross said backers of the pay raise are bent on getting Congress' action during the lameduck session in hopes of getting more votes and letting the old Congress, rather than the new one convening in January, take the blame.

The 92 lameduck House members retiring or defeated in last week's election no longer have anything to lose by voting for a pay raise. And many returning congressmen might be more willing to vote for a pay raise at a time when their next reelection is a full two years away.

Even so, staff experts on both the House and Senate Post Office committees generally agree that pay raise proposals will go nowhere unless Ford and Congress' leaders agree to back one of them. They also agreed that chances for that are poor.

A House source said staff development of pay raise proposals was originally authorized by lameduck House Post Office Committee Chairman Thaddeus J. Dulski, D-N.Y. Dulski could not be reached for comment in his Buffalo, N.Y., district.

Palestinian chief appeals to U.N.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Greeted by resounding cheers, Arab guerrilla chief Yasir Arafat took the Palestinian case before the General Assembly today, saying: "I have come bearing an olive branch and a freedom fighters gun."

Then he told the packed assembly hall, "Do not let the olive branch fall from my hand."

Before starting his address, Arafat responded to the cheers and applause of the delegates by holding his hands clasped over his head — a traditional gesture of victory.

The Israeli delegation boycotted the session.

Arafat wore a traditional Arab headdress as he stood before the 138-nation assembly. He gestured frequently with his finger during the address.

Turning to Assembly President Abdelaziz Bouteflika of Algeria, Arafat said, "War flames up in Palestine, and yet, Mr. President, it is in Palestine that peace will be born."

Outside in United Nations Plaza, scene of a mass demonstration last week by Israeli supporters and foes of Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization, about 200 demonstrators had gathered to wave placards and Israeli flags. A Palestinian group also was demonstrating in New York City.

Arafat appealed for a "radical approach" to the Palestinian problem and asked the American people to support the Arab cause.

"I ask the American people whether the demonstrations of hostility outside this great hall reflect the true intent of American will," he said.

"What, I ask you plainly, is the crime the people of Palestine have committed against you? Why do you fight us so?"

Speaking in Arabic, Ararat told the General Assembly: "Zionist ideology and Israeli leadership ... offer Jews perpetual bloodshed, endless war and continuous thralldom."

Arafat, who leads the over-all Palestinian guerrilla movement, invited Israel's Jews to join with the Palestinian Arabs "in one democratic state where Christian, Jew and Moslem live in justice, equality and fraternity."

Arafat arrived under unprecented security precautions here, flying by helicopter to U.N. headquarters after landing on an overnignt flight from Algeria early today.

Before Arafat began speaking, the New York City Fire Department said an anonymous caller had warned that bombs would explode at U.N. headquarters at 11:28 a. m. and 11:42 a.m. This was about the time the session was scheduled to start. Bomb squad units were dispatched and the Fire Department later termed the threats as unfounded.

Outside U. N. headquarters on the East River, a small group of about 100 demonstrators chanted, "Murderers! Murderers!" as limousines carrying Arafat's aides drew up to the United Nations entrance. Other than that the area was clear and under heavy police guard.

Arafat arrived earlier at the United Nations by helicopter from John F. Kennedy Airport under unprecedented security precautions.

The bearded, 44-year-old leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), was listed to face the General Assembly at 10:30 a. m., EST, but the session was delayed.

Just before the scheduled opening of the U.N. General Assembly session, a woman with the Palestinian group told a reporter that 200 copies of an English translation of Arafat's prepared address had been "stolen." She did not elaborate.

Arafat arrived in New York from Algeria just before sunup. Surrounded by security men, he was escorted to the helicopter, which whisked him to the United Nations' garden. He was quickly hustled inside the building.

Feeling against Arafat's PLO runs high among New York City's two million Jews. The leader of the Jewish Defense

Yasir Arafat

League, a militant minority group among them, has been arrested on a charge of threatening to assassinate Arafat.

An aide said that after Arafat entered U.N. headquarters he was reported to have taken a nap.

Then just before 10 a. m., Arafat emerged from a door to the area of the assembly meeting hall and made his way to a room behind the podium.

He later stopped outside and at the office assigned to the PLO and he and 10 or so other men kissed each other on the cheeks, an Arab custom.

There were several police and Coast Guard launches in the East River immediately behind the 39-story glass, steel and stone building.

The 16-acre U.N. complex was closed to the public. Outsiders could enter only with special passes from a temporary outpost across the street.

New York police canceled all days off and redistributed its manpower to concentrate on the midtown Manhattan area, where 16 PLO members were staying in the Waldorf Towers section of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

Depression unlikely, say economists

WASHINGTON (AP) — Administration officials while admitting that the nation is entering a recession, say there is little danger of a depression.

"We are not now in a recession, but new figures will probably indicate we are moving into a recession," Ron Nessen, President Ford's press secretary, said Tuesday.

He said economic statistics for November will show a continued erosion of the nation's economy, which has been declining since the first of the year.

But there is little danger of the recession growing into a depression, according to Edgar Fiedler, an assistant secretary of the treasury for economic affairs.

"I would never rule out the absolute possibility of a more severe decline, but in my own mind, the possibility is very small," Fiedler said.

He said he is hopeful the recession can reach its bottom by mid-1975 with an economic upturn after that. But he acknowledged, "I have no basis for forecasting it."

Another administration economist, Sidney L. Jones, said the nation's unemployment rate could rise to 7 per cent, without programs to help, such as Ford's proposed expanded public service employment program.

Congress is expected to enact an expanded program.

Nessen indicated that the worsening economic outlook may cause President Ford to change some parts of his economic program, including the 5 per cent income surtax on upper-middle and upper incomes.

"He's not wedded to the 5 per cent (surtax) but he is wedded to the principle that there must be some way to raise the money" to pay for such things as help for the unemployed, Nessen said.

Fiedler argued there should be no major retreat from the fight against inflation. He said that "inflation is causing most of the weakness in the economy."

In concluding that a recession was imminent, the White House undoubtedly took the following economic statistics into account:

—Unemployment has risen in the past year from 4.6 per cent to 6 per cent in October.

—Industrial production was down 1 per cent from a year earlier in September and is expected to drop even further in months ahead.

—The country's real economic growth, as measured by the Gross National Product, has declined for three consecutive quarters, the first time this has happened since the recession of 1960 and 1961.

Hearings reopen on Rockefeller

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nelson A. Rockefeller testified today that he asked his brother Laurance to help find investors to finance a book critical of former Supreme Court Justice Arthur J. Goldberg, his 1970 opponent for New York governor.

The vice presidential nominee's te .imony portrayed him as more central to the publication of the book than he has so far acknowledged. He said any discrepancies are due to a "sketchy" memory rather than any attempt to cover up the facts.

Testifying before live television cameras in the Senate Caucus Room, Rockefeller told Rules Committee members that a controversial series of loans and gifts by him to close aides and public officials posed no conflict of interest and were not intended to corrupt those who accepted them.

In a counterattack aimed at critics of those transactions, Rockefeller said his family's great fortune does not blind him to the need for morality in public service.

The loans and gifts sprang from a personal sense of "sharing," Rockefeller said, and added: "I do not believe the day has yet come ...where the decencies of human relationships disqualify one for public office."

Some Rockefeller critics have suggested that at least some of the gifts and loans may have violated New York state law. Chairman Howard W. Cannon of the Rules Committee said the "nagging question" lingers as to whether they placed those who received them into "psychological servitude" to Rockefeller — whether or not that was intended.

"There is a sign on the political wall that reads, 'No tipping allowed,'" Cannon said.

It is illegal in New York to give public officials gifts valued at more than $25 with the purpose of influencing or rewarding official conduct. But Rockefeller said he had no such intent.

Rockefeller's gifts also led House Majority Leader Thomas P. O'Neill to express "very grave doubts" about Rockefeller's nomination, though he said he has not decided how to vote.

"I'm not even sure it (the nomination) will be reported out of committee," O'Neill said in an interview with the Boston Globe.

Referring to Rockefeller's statement that he made gifts to officials in other states to lure them to work in his New York state administration, O'Neill asked: "Do governors of wealth buy up competent people? How do you justify that, the prospect of people in public life, to induce them to leave one place to come to your own state? I think that's a serious matter, and I want to know why he gave these huge sums of money to all of those people."

ABC broadcast today's session under a rotation set up by the three major television networks.

Rockefeller later accepted "full responsibility" for the book, apologized to Goldberg for its allegedly derogatory content, and said Laurance Rockefeller had underwritten it for $60,000 as a business investment.

Rockefeller also disclosed that in the years 1957-1974 he gave a total of $3.26 million to Republican campaigns, including $1 million to his own fruitless attempts to win the GOP presidential nomination.

The political gifts included $62,025 to former President Richard M. Nixon's 1972 campaign and $200,000 to the 1968 campaign for the nomination of George M. Romney.

Rockefeller said that over the last 17 years his brothers John, Laurance and David, and his sister Abby gave a total of $2.85 million in support of his four state and three national campaigns.

He said his stepmother, the late Martha Baird Rockefeller, gave him an average of $1.5 million for each of the seven campaigns.

In his opening statement, Chairman Cannon, noted that Rockefeller at first denied any personal involvement in the publication of the book, "Arthur J. Goldberg, the Old and the New," by Victor Lasky.

Among the spectators as the hearing began was Nancy Kissinger, like her husband, Henry A. Kissinger, a former member of the Rockefeller staff. Rockefeller has said one of the gifts — $50,000 — went to Kissinger before he became secretary of state.

Consumers disagree with economic council priorities

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's inflation watchdog agency is directing its first major effort at supermarkets which raise the price of goods already on display. But a prominent consumer organization is boycotting the effort because it says the practice costs shoppers less than a dime a week.

The Council on Wage and Price Stability opens hearings on the practice today. The hearings represent to a large degree the council's ultimate weapon in the government's war on inflation.

Council Director Albert Rees says the hearings follow widespread irritation among consumers who feel they are being gouged by layers of successively higher price stickers on groceries and other products.

But the executive director of Consumers Union, a non-profit product testing organization, declined an invitation to testify.

The official, Rhoda H. Karpatkin, said the issue is simply a sympton, not the cause, of inflation, and could cost a family as little as a dime a week.

If the practice is banned, she said, the supermarkets will make it up elsewhere, such as by maintaining smaller stocks, and this would increase costs much more.

As far as foods on shelves go, Ms. Karpatkin said, the government should enforce drained weight labelling. At present, she said, Consumer's Union has found that the average one pound can contains about 10 ounces of food and the rest liquid.

"Your failure to deal with the serious issues may inevitably lead to speculation over whether these hearings are some form of government put-on," she wrote to Virginia Knauer, President Ford's consumer adviser. Knauer and Rees are cochairing the hearings.

The invitiation to testify was accepted, however, by the Consumer Federation of American and the National

Second storm in two days battering northwest coast of Alaska

NOME, Alaska (AP) — Communities along the storm-battered northwest Alaska coast braced for a second powerful storm today as flood waters began to recede.

No casualties were reported after Bering Sea waves whipped inland by strong winds flooded sections of Nome and surrounding villages in what Gov. William A. Egan called a "full scale disaster."

Nome and some other communities along the coast were without adequate food, drinking water and power as the second storm approached.

Early today forecasters at the National Weather Service in Anchorage were tracking a second storm front that appeared destined to follow closely follow the trail of the first hurricaneforce winds.

"Right now this second storm is near Adak Island in the Aleutian chain and it's going eastward at a very fast rate," said forecaster Dave Evanson. "I think it will turn northeastward and go into the western part of Alaska and follow the same pattern except we expect this one will be more to the east and therefore more inland."

Evanson said the storm center will come close to Nome but is likely to be a greater threat to surrounding villages.

The weather service said flood waters in the area were dropping early today but portions of Nome which had been under five feet of water were still covered.

Some buildings were destroyed. Residents battled the floodwaters in high winds and freezing temperatures.

The winds propelled huge waves inland Tuesday. Residents were trying frantically to sandbag Nome's electric power plant to keep water from the batteries powering teletype circuits and emergency phones — the only link with the outside world.

Emergency shelters were set up in schools in this town of 2,500 on the Bering Sea.

"This town is hurt and hurt badly. But this town has been hurt before. It has always come back and will come back again," Mayor Robert Renshaw said Tuesday night.

KNOM radio in Nome said the east end of Nome had been evacuated and one road "continues to be struck by fierce waves. The east end is a jumble of houses knocked one against an other.

"Nearby barges, which slid off their supports, were responsible for the damage to east end dwellings," the station said. Only four houses were left standing in that part of town, KNOM said.

Charter airplanes carrying disaster personnel and communications equipment and technicians from Anchorage were foiled in their initial landing attempts by high winds and a thick coat of ice on the runway at Nome. RCA Alaska said one plane later managed to land.

Nome residents hauled water from springs and doled it out a can at a time. Two main streets were flooded, but a third was above the rampaging waters and the Civil Defense Office said food supplies could last only several days.

Singer Duesing returns to LU

Lyric baritone Dale Duesing will return to his alma mater Friday to participate in the centennial celebration of the Lawrence University Conservatory of Music.

A recital by Duesing at 8 p.m. in Lawrence Memorial Chapel will be the third offering in the university's 1974-75 Artist Series.

Duesing sings with the Deutsche Oper am Rhein in Dusseldorf, Germany. His program will include songs composed by three members of the Lawrence Conservatory faculty — professors Clyde Duncan and James W. Ming and associate professor Robert C. Below. All three were on the Conservatory faculty when Duesing, who graduated with highest distinction in performance, attended Lawrence from 1963 to 1967.

In the first portion of the program, Duesing's piano accompanist will be Mari Taniguchi, associate professor of music, who was Duesing's voice teacher at Lawrence. Duesing was a student also of John Koopman, associate professor of music.

In addition to the songs by Below, Duncan and Ming, he will sing selections by Henry Purcell, Gabriel Faure and Richard Strauss.

The Lawrence Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Joel Rosenberg, will accompany him in "Five Mystical Songs" by Ralph Vaughn-Williams.

A native of Milwaukee, Duesing began his musical studies as a pianist. He switched to vocal studies at Lawrence and in 1967 he received first prize in the Wisconsin District Metropolitan Opera contest. Later that year, he received a Fulbright fellowship to continue his education at the Munich Hochschule fur Musik. He received a Rockefeller grant in 1968 to assist him in starting his career with the Muenster Municipal Opera Company in Muenster, Germany, as lyric baritone.

Duesing has appeared with the opera companies of Stuttgart, Wiesbaden, Rotterdam, Kassel, Lubeck and Berlin. In 1973, Duesing made his Hamburg Opera debut in the role of Guglielmo in Mozart's "Cosi fan Tutte."

Upcoming performers in the 1974-75 Lawrence University Artist Series will be pianist Misha Dichter, Feb. 14, and the Bill Evans Trio, March 7. The Baroque Festival Orchestra and the Milwaukee Symphony Orchestra were the opening attractions of the series.

Tickets for Duesing's concert at Lawrence are $4.50 and $6 for adults and $3 and $4 for students and senior citizens. Student rush tickets, if available, will be sold at the door for $1.50, beginning 10 minutes before the performance. Tickets can be purchased at the Lawrence University box office, 115 N. Park Ave. The box office is open from noon until 6 p.m. daily except Sunday. Ticket reservations and further information can be obtained by calling 734-8695.

Maesch has organ recital at Lawrence

LaVahn K. Maesch, whose association with Lawrence University spanned nearly half a century, will present an organ recital at 3 p.m. Saturday.

The recital will be part of the week-long centennial celebration of the university's Conservatory of Music. Maesch assisted in designing the organ which he will play in the Lawrence Memorial Chapel. The concert will be open to the public without charge.

Maesch was a student, teacher and dean at Lawrence during the terms of seven of Lawrence's 14 presidents. He entered Lawrence in 1921, when Samuel G. Plantz was president, and began teaching at the Conservatory in 1926, the second year of Henry M. Wriston's 12 years at Lawrence. He served on the faculty during the tenure of presidents Thomas N. Barrows (1937-43) and Nathan M. Pusey (1944-53). He was appointed director of the Conservatory in 1954 by Douglas M. Knight (1954-63) and in 1965, he was named dean of the Conservatory by Curtis W. Tarr (1963-69). His retirement came in 1970 under the university's present president, Thomas S. Smith.

Maesch is now organist of the Church of the Palms, United Church of Christ, in Sun City, Ariz.

Maesch's program will consist of "Paean," by Kenneth Leighton; "Suite du Deuxieme Ton," by Louis-Nicolas Clerambault; "Pastoral: Suite in F Major," by Johann Sebastian Bach; "Prelude for Rosh Hoshana," by Herman Berlinski; "Song for the Bells," by Daniel Pinkham, and "L'Ange a la Trompette," by Jacques Charpentier.

During his nearly 50 years in Appleton, Maesch became widely known as a teacher, composer and choral conductor, as well as organist. He was for many years organist and choirmaster at the First Congregational Church, where his wife, Madge Helmer Maesch, a 1929 Lawrence graduate, founded and directed the bell choir.

Maesch appeared as organist in a 1928 performance of "The Messiah" and, from 1953 to 1970, conducted the university's annual presentation of Handel's masterwork. He was a member of the board of the Wisconsin Arts Foundation and Council, dean of the northeastern Wisconsin chapter of the American Guild of Organists, president of the Wisconsin Music Teachers' Assn. and of the Music Teachers' National Assn. In 1960, he was named the University of Wisconsin's "Man of Music."

France adapts Russian novel

Richard X. France, assistant professor of theater and drama at Lawrence University, has adapted Alexander Solzhenitsyn's novel, "One Day In The Life of Ivan Denisovich," into a full-length play. His adaptation was published recently by Performance Publishing of Elgin, Ill.

France joined the Lawrence staff in September after teaching at the State University of New York in Geneseo, Rhode Island College in Providence and Allegheny Community College in Pittsburgh.

He studied playwriting at Yale School of Drama and earned an FA in playwriting from Carnegie-Mellon University in 1970. He also holds a Ph.D. in theater history from Carnegie-Mellon.

France wrote three plays while at Carnegie-Mellon.

FRANK LLOYD WRIGHT: PROPHET WITHOUT HONOR

Unless you read it in a book, you probably wouldn't know that Frank Lloyd wright was born and raised in Wisconsin: there is not one Wright-designed public building in the state to signify that Frank Lloyd Wright was a native son. Why?

That question is addressed by his wife, Oglivanna, his students, critics and former associates, and the legacy of his work, which is continuing at Taliesin East near Madison, is examined.

It's a compelling look at the man — his lifestyle, his dreams, his innovative architectural designs — and the controversies that surrounded both his personal and professional life.

Shattering impact of a gun

7:30 - 9 — Channels 9-11 — "Wednesday Movie Of The Week: The Gun" is a powerful film with a shattering climax that will remain with viewers for some time. Produced and written by the very good team of Richard Levinson and William Link (from a story by Jay Benson), this is beautifully directed by John Badham and features a cast of mostly unfamiliar actors. The star is the gun. We follow it from its "birth" in a factory through its various owners, its near escape from death and finally — but to tell would spoil the impact. The actors include David Huffman, Mariclaire Costello, Ramon Bieri, Stephen Elliott and Pepe Serna.

7 - 7:30 — Channels 9-11 — Rumors of a post-marital affair between Mama's (Theresa Merritt) late husband Oscar and Mama's often late friend Lenore (Hilda Haynes) begin to circulate when the church considers naming a Sunday School wing after Oscar on "That's My Mama."

7 - 8 — Channel 5 — Caroline (Karen Grassle) becomes the temporary schoolteacher on "The Little House On the Prairie" and she takes an interest in the oldest boy in the school, who, it turns out, can't read. This lad is played by Dirk Blocker, the lookalike son of the late Dan Blocker who costarred on Bonanza all those years, with Michael Landon who, as everyone knows, plays Papa here.

7 - 8 — Channels 2-7 — Specials replace Sons and Daughters for the next few weeks with "The Sany Duncan Special" leading off. It's being taped in London, by the good team of Gary Smith and Dwight Hemion and cute Sandy's guests are Gene Kelly, Paul Lynde, John Davidson and Valorie Armstrong.

8 - 9 — Channel 5 — "Lucas Tanner" (David Hartman) relives some of his days as a father when he has to care for little Glendon (Robbie Rist), when the lad's grandmother is taken seriously ill. It's a sentimental, warm tale and it's possible to believe every moment.

8 - 9 — Channels 2-7 — Police arrest the wrong man for a series of gruesome rape-murders and "Cannon" (William Conrad) must act fast to save the accused from hanging by vigilantes. Nothing like a good old-fashioned story and this old-fashioned story is like nothing, but it features the spectacular Snake River Canyon and Shoshone Falls in Idaho, where it was filmed. Ruth Roman and Kristoffer Tabori guest star.

9 - 10 — Channel 5 — "Petrocelli" (Barry Newman) gets to defend an Italian client, which makes for added interest. John David Carson plays the second generation Italian, accused of killing a girl who picked him up in a bar. John Marley is his father, too concerned with the old ways to understand his son. This one has more interest than usual. Simon Scott plays the victim's father.

9 - 10 — Channels 9-11 — Christie (Theresa Graves) poses as a songstress to infiltrate the recording empire of James J. O'Neill (Tim O'Connor) in order to link him with the murder of a very popular recording artist on "Get Christie Love." Frank Sinatra Jr. cameos as the corpse — no comment — in a murder story of record proportions.

9 - 10 — Channels 2-7 — If "The Manhunter's" story had been filmed in a period commensurate with the age of the plot, Humphrey Bogart would have starred. And he would have helped a completely transparent plot about truck hijacking.

Haiti, Guatemala made the difference in OAS failure to lift Cuban embargo

BY WILLIAM F. nicholsen
Associated Press Writer

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — Haiti and Guatemala were the key to the failure of the drive to lift the Organization of American States' diplomatic and economic sanctions against Cuba.

Sponsors of the resolution to end the 10-year-old quarantine against the Castro government counted Haiti and Guatemala among the 14 votes they needed.

But after four days of negotiations at the foreign ministers' conference that ended Tuesday, Haiti and Guatemala joined the United States, Bolivia, Brazil and Nicaragua in abstaining. The vote was 12 to 3, two short of the two-thirds majority needed for adoption.

Diplomatic sources said the Guatemalans and Haitians came to the OAS conference intending to vote in favor of the resolution.

They said the conservative leaders of Guatemala's armed forces put heavy pressure on their government to abstain.

Other sources indicated the Haitians had hoped to use their vote as a lever to obtain financial aid — from the United States in exchange for a "no" vote or from oil-rich Venezuela for a "yes." When these overtures were rebuffed, the Haitians decided to abstain.

Foreign Minister Gonzalo Facio of Costa Rica, the principal organizer of the conference, said he had 14 sure votes before the meeting, "believe me, I did my homework, but several of those firm votes suddenly changed."

Foreign Minister Emilio Rabasa of Mexico disagreed.

"I said there were 12 sure votes even before coming here. The rest were imagination," he commented.

Chilean Foreign Minister Patricio Carvajal, one of the leading opponents of the pro-Cuban campaign, said the other side's optimistic anticipations at the start of the conference were "fairy tales."

The United States took a neutral stance throughout the meeting, exerting no pressure one way or the other and leaving the decision entirely up to the Latin American. Facio put part of the blame for the resolution's failure on this "negative" U.S. attitude. But William D. Rogers, the assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, said his delegation took a "new and healthy posture, not to pressure countries how they should act."

In Buenos Aires, Argentine Foreign Minister Alberto Vignes, whose government has flouted the embargo with more than $600 million in sales to Cuba in the last 15 months, said the Quito vote was premature and "not a defeat."

Vignes said the issue will undoubtedly be raised again at the meeting of American foreign ministers to be held in Buenos Aires next March.

Rogers said the United States has not changed its policy toward Cuba. He noted that regardless of any action the OAS might take, the United States has a number of laws restricting trade with Castro's island.

Outlaws didn't plant bomb, attorney says

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Attorney Alan Eisenberg, who has represented several members of the Outlaws motorcycle gang, said Tuesday the organization denies any knowledge of who planted the bomb which killed a newsboy early Nov. 4.

The group "absolutely, categorically, to a man, denies having anything to do with it," he said.

Larry Anstett, 15, a Milwaukee Sentinel carrier, was killed when a bomb exploded as he touched a package on the top of a car parked in front of Northwest Side home.

It has been alleged that the bombing might be connected to a feud between the Outlaws and another motorcycle group, and that the bomb was intended for a man who testified as a state witness in the armed robbery trial of two Outlaws.

LaFollette won job, wants to keep it

Post-Crescent Madison bureau

MADISON — Secretary of State-elect Douglas LaFollette says he wants to be the state's busiest secretary of state, but not its last.

LaFollette, a 33-year-old graduate of the state Senate who stepped forward as Robert Zimmerman's successor in the Democratic landslide last week, might find that his most difficult task in the new office will be keeping the office alive. It is more than Capitol speculation that many legislagtors, and even Gov Patrick J. Lucey, might be formulating plans to have the offices of secretary of state and state treasurer either disbanded altogether or reduced to administrative, appointive or civil service posts. Lucey campaigned in 1970 on that issue, calling for the elimination of the offices which he said then were not needed. Lucey has lobbied actively for a cabinet-style government in Wisconsin and the new campaign-election law passed earlier this year removed all election responsibilities from the secretary of state's office to a nonelective state Elections Board. Lucey was not pressed to speak on this issue during the recently completed campaign and is vacationimg off the coast of South America and is not available to comment.

His aide, Robert Dunn, said the prospect of making major changes in the secretary of state and treasurer offices had not been discussed in strategy sessions for the upcoming biennium bnt he didn't discount the possibility of it arising.

A member of the state Senate's new Democratic majority stated privately that legislation will definitely be introduced to take the two offices off the ballot. If such a constitutional amendment is introduced, it will have to pass both houses of the legislature on two successive sessions and then be approved by the state electorate in a referendum.

"That's crazy," said LaFollette in response to the suggestion that the office be scaled down or elminiated. "Heck, this office is important. Talk about eliminating it is just political rhetoric. All the corporation filings are taken care of by this office."

LaFollette, a former college instructor who served two years in the Senate, said he would oppose efforts to include the secretary of state's office in an appointive cabinet system.

"This country has problems that need to be solved," he said. "What we need are people to speak out on these problems and to try to solve them. It would be bad public policy to make more offices appointive because appointed officials don't speak out on the issues. Only elected officials do that when they are campaigning.

LaFollette said he doesn't know yet whether his new office will give him the platform to speak out on the issues in the way he wishes to. He also said he does not know what future offices he will be interested in.

He mildly criticized the legislature's removal of election responsibilities from the secretary of state's office, although he quickly added that he isn't certain how the new arrangement will work.

"The legislature decided that it was more important to have a nonpartisan body making the decisions than it was to have visibility and accountability," LaFollette said.

Famed Plaza Hotel again changes owners

NEW YORK (AP) — The Plaza Hotel, a Central Park landmark, has been sold to Western International Hotels Co. for $25 million.

A spokesman for the Seattlebased chain promised Tuesday to put enough money into the 67-year-old hotel to "maintain the Plaza's prestigious position as one of the finest hotels in the world."

It was the second time the Plaza, celebrated by title in one play and movie, has been sold in less than three years. Sonesta International Hotels, a Boston-based firm, was the seller this time.

UW faculty asks 18% pay boost

MADISON, Wis. (AP)—University of Wisconsin faculty members have asked for an 18 per cent salary increase next year, and another 18 per cent the year after if inflation continues its pace.

A committee of faculty members from around the state made the recommendation at the request of the Board of Regents, which is scheduled to take up the matter at a meeting later this month.

The 18 per cent increase being sought for the first year of the coming biennium would cost about $38 million. The recommended increase during the second year is six per cent plus the percentage rise in the Cost of Living index.

Prof. Morton Rothstein of the Madison campus, one of the committee members, described the request as modest, and said it might not satisfy some professors.

Rothstein's committee said it would take a nearly 17 per cent pay raise for faculty to just catch up with inflation during the past two years.

County control urged on farm tax break decisions

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Decisions on land use control should be made at the county level, several participants in conference on the topic sponsored by the Wisconsin Farm Bureau said Tuesday.

University of Wisconsin land economist Raymond Penn, a member of the panel set up to draft legislation for carrying out the state's constitutional amendment allowing preferential tax treatment for agriculutural land, said the decision on which lands to apply the tax break should be a local decision supervised by the county.

State Rep. Mary Lou Munts, D-Madison, said that if the state was to make up for the tax shifts, it should have assurance that the land preservation was relatively permanent. She said this would require strengthening county powers, such as taking away the current town veto power over county zoning.

Roger Fleming, secretarytreasurer of the American Farm Bureau Federation, warned against enactment of a federal land use law.

"State and local problems have been aggravated, not resolved, by the expensive programs developed by the central government in Washington," he said. "Generally they use the wrong machinery to the job, even if it needs doing."

Fleming said that in the fields of welfare and education the federal government created as many problems as it solved.

Penn said issues brought up at the World Food Conference in Rome have shown preservation of U.S. farmland to be more important than ever.

Squealing tires won't be legal in Outagamie

In a few weeks, it will be illegal in Outagamie County for the driver of a motor vehicle to "accelerate . . . so as to emit an unnecessary noise as a result of the friction caused between the tires and the surface on which the vehicle travels."

In other words, you can't squeal your tires when you take off from a stop. Not only that, but if you try it on gravel (which doesn't squeal) you'll be breaking the law for causing your tires to throw stones.

This new county law was passed by the county board Tuesday, but not as part of the traffic code. The offense will be a violation of the disorderly conduct ordinance.

Supv. John Hennessy questioned the need for such a law and suggested it be tabled until the need was substantiated.

But Supv. Fred Rehfeldt, a member of the sponsoring judiciary committee, objected. "It seems odd that we should question a resolution like this," he said. "The police can't control the problem. It'll be good to correct these lousy boys and get rid of it."

Supv. John Marzion, looking over other paragraphs of the disorderly conduct ordinance, suggested that it was written to get rid of the county board. "We've already violated Section A," he said, referring to the paragraph dealing with boisterous and loud conduct.

The section on tire squealing was passed on a 30-8 vote.

Langedyke is now Memorial

BY BOB LOWE
Post-Crescent staff writer

Langedyke Park is now officially known as Appleton Memorial Park.

That decision was made by the Appleton Parks and Recreation Commission at its regular meeting Tuesday. The park will not be named after any one person but might have several areas set aside to honor specific individuals.

The commission also opened bids for the construction of a swimming pool at Appleton High School-West. The apparent low bidder on the general construction project is Theo. Utschig & Sons, Inc., Appleton, with a base bid of $407,300.

Utschig promised completion by June 1, 1975.

Low bidders on related work on the project include Klinger Painting and Decorating, Oshkosh, painting, $11,477; Hietpas, Inc., Little Chute, plumbing, $110,200; Azco, Inc., Appleton, heating, ventilation and air conditioning, $54,600, and M & S Electric Co., Appleton, electrical work, $51,600.

The commission will meet in a special session to make a final decision on the awarding of the contract. No date was set.

In another action, the commission adopted a revised version of a preliminary master plan for Appleton Memorial Park. It also approved a preliminary grading operation for the area surrounding the softball complex at a cost of approximately $81,000.

The grading operation includes site preparation for eventual construction of several facilities like play areas, restrooms and shelters. It does not include parking, which the commission listed as one of the priority items for that section of the park.

The revised master plan as outlined by Larry Lamar, a landscape architect from the Madison firm of Lamar, Schreiber and Associates, could involve expenditures amounting to $2.1 million.

This estimate would cover the development of a 180-acre area to accommodate softball fields, picnic areas, tennis courts, parking facilities, bike trails, concession stands, roads, sewers, free play areas, a possible sports complex, a lagoon, shelter areas and administrative and maintenance buildings.

None of these facilities has been approved. The commission will grant approval to specific projects and area development according to its own priorities and budget.

The park will be developed in a five-phase plan. The first phase, which includes the grading of the softball complex and the construction of play areas, shelters, parking facilities and restrooms south and west of the playing fields, could cost up to $260,000. Lamar cautioned that this figure is adjustable.

By approving the grading operation as the preliminary step in developing this first area, the commission hopes the project would become eligible for matching funds from the state Department of Natural Resources.

Deadline for application for those funds, which would pay 50 per cent of the cost if approved, is Jan. 1, 1975.

A motion to reduce or eliminate expenses accrued by the organizers of the recent Applefest festivities for use of city park facilities, was denied.

The request was made because the organizers said the event was financially unsuccessful and left them in debt. But the commission members felt it would establish a dangerous precedent if they did not charge the required fees.

An agreement for the administration of the swimming pools at East and West High Schools was reached between the Board of Education and the commission.

The agreement, which will be approved by the commission at its special session, barring last minute disagreements, calls for the commission to have jurisdiction over the new swimming pool at West High while the board will retain jurisdiction over the East High pool.

Social services funds restored

BY DON CASTONIA
Post-Crescent staff writer

Differences in philosophy on how to handle budgeting for new personnel sparked most of the budget debate Tuesday in which the Outagamie County Board restored all of the money to the social services budget that had been recommended cut by County Executive Alvin Woehler.

Efforts by the board of social services and health committee to get approval for three additional social workers in the juvenile services area and for two additional people in the county nurse's office were blocked at least temporarily by a decision to await a report later in the week from a consulting firm making a job study for the county.

In budget actions, the board:

- Approved full funding for the Big Brothers program for 1975;
- Approved a social services department budget as recommended by the finance committee;
- Approved budgets for law enforcement and courts basically as recommended by the exeuctive and finance committee, and
- On Monday night approved an airport operations budget unchanged from executive and finance committee recommendations.

The board also went on record supporting the board of social services in its contract stand with the state. The state-proposed contract for the county to administer social services programs is about $52,000 less than what James Stampp, department director, said is needed.

The three social workers requested would handle juvenile deliquency cases assigned by juvenile court. Stampp told the board that the caseload has nearly doubled since the first of the year. There was a caseload of about 100 at the start of the year and four social workers in that unit. Stampp said 25 cases per worker is considered normal. The present caseload is 169, according to Supv. Herman Ripp, social services board chairman.

Stampp said a recent survey revealed that only five of the juvenile cases came from welfare families and that 20 per cent came from business and professional families.

Under an unwritten board policy, all personnel requests are handled at the time the department budget is passed on by the board. But Supv. Sylvester Lenz, chairman of the personnel committee, asked that consideration be delayed until Thursday afternoon when a report would be available from Dickson and Associates, Neenah, that would include a recommendation on the positions.

Supv. John Kellogg, a member of the social services board, sought to have a set amount of money included in the budget to cover the positions, contending that putting off action until the end of the week would simply result in burying the issue. "What better time is there to discuss the need than now?" he asked. Supv. Ted LaPin agreed. "I favor handling budget items as they come up," he said.

Supv. Gene Retzlaff contended that the positions should be created before they are funded, which prompted Supv. Daniel Verstegen, another member of the social services board, to comment that it appeared they were "involved in the Outagamie shuffle again."

"You can't do anything between budgets and you can't do anything at budget time," Verstegen said.

The personnel committee prevailed on the social workers and on a similar attempt by Kellogg to get money placed in the budget for a third county nurse and part-time clerical help for the department.

The Big Brothers program, as approved, calls for spending $39,235 in the county next year for matches referred through the Department of Social Services. The United Fund will pay $5,393 of that cost, leaving $33,832 to be funded by the county. This is $9,000 more than had been recommended by the finance committee.

There were, however, no arguments against the program itself. Woehler, who had eliminated the program from his budget on the grounds that it needed a new approval from the county board, said he felt it was "an essential program, but the degree of support is your

Nonsmokers try to organize

Dorothy Hoffman is allergic to tobacco smoke. It makes her ill. "All you have to do is blow one puff of smoke at me and I'm down."

Her husband, Urban, believes that if the Lord wanted man to smoke, He would have given him a chimney.

Diana Forsythe said she has been trying, unsuccessfully, to clear the cigarette smoke from Air Wisconsin planes.

Tobacco smoke gives Helen Ciske, Miss Appleton 1975, watery eyes and a headache. What really bugs her is when smokers light up in a restaurant before she's finished eating.

Miss Ciske, with the help of the Wisconsin Lung Association, is trying to form a Fox Valley chapter of Group Against Smokers' Pollution (GASP).

GASP got off to something less than a breathtaking start Tuesday night in Appleton. Only a half dozen nonsmokers showed up for the organizational meeting. But they were an enthusiastic half dozen.

Miss Ciske and Jane Kaplan of the lung association were confident attendance will be greater at the Dec. 11 meet-

Appleton Redevelopment Authority members want the people to help plan its projects.

Citizen participation was a major topic as the agency held its second annual meeting Tuesday in its offices at 202 E. College Ave.

The ARA re-elected its chairman and vice chairman for a third year's term, learned that officials of J.C. Penney Co. were in town to hear a "sales pitch" by ARA spokesmen during the day, and authorized the redevelopment director to hire his first staff member, a secretary.

Members also agreed informally to ask the city to increase its annual contribution to the ARA budget, on grounds that added funds may be needed when the first redevelopment project gets under way.

Another reason is that the City Council recently handed the ARA the job of applying for Appleton's approximately $300,000 in newly available federal Housing and Community Development Act funds.

While the funds are earmarked for the city's use, it is necessary to prepare a three-year community development plan, a housing assistance plan and a first-year plan and budget.

Among the relatively broad rules for receiving the funds is a requirement to involve citizens in the planning. A variety of means of meeting this requirement was offered.

Suggestions included seeking out a retired public official to provide voluntary assistance, calling on university students to conduct surveys, publishing a public opinion questionnaire on housing and development issues in the newspaper and conducting a more scientific study of community opinions.

V.I. Minahan, newly re-elected chairman, voiced concern that it is easy to miss "the quiet people out there who don't go to meetings."

"I would very much like to see some real citizen input," he said. The ARA should "be very careful that none of us ends up riding our own hobby horses." The agency's plans for the downtown area and other projects should be what the people, rather than a handful of public officials, want, he said.

John McKenzie, vice chairman, suggested turning to the "ready-made committee" formed about the same time the redevelopment authority started. He referred to the Project 76 Committee, a citizens' group organized by the Appleton Area Chamber of Commerce.

Ald. Roylance Pointer (14th), City Council member of the agency, wasn't sure the chamber-promoted group would provide a broad enough representation of citizens. "Is '76

Little Chute rescue van isn't an ambulance

BY BILL KNUTSON
Post-Crescent staff writer

LITTLE CHUTE — Melvin Baulch was excited and frightened. It was 2 a.m. His month-old daughter was gasping for breath.

He dialed the telephone operator and asked for help. He wound up with the Little Chute Fire Department, which had just put a new, $14,000 fire-rescue van into service.

The fire department wouldn't come to Baulch's home in Dutch Harbor Estates, on the village's northwest side.

Baulch was advised that there was nothing the firemen could do for a choking child because all they had was oxygen. Baulch was advised to call an ambulance.

By that time, Baulch said, several minutes had passed and the infant was worse. He said he didn't know of any ambulances nearby. So he and his wife and son "raced like hell" to St. Elizabeth Hospital in Appleton with the sick infant.

A mucus buildup was affecting the child's respiratory system. She was treated in the emergency room and released.

An angry Baulch has complained to Fire Chief Thomas Lamers and he said he intends to seek an explanation from the village board next week why the fire department wouldn't help his daughter.

Lamers told The Post-Crescent he wouldn't send out the fire department when Baulch asked simply because firemen do not have the equipment or the expertise to handle medical emergencies.

The big yellow-green rescue vehicle put into service a month ago was not intended as an ambulance and won't be used as such, Lamers explained.

He believes people in Little Chute realize they must call for an ambulance from Appleton or Kaukauna.

Baulch said he's found many people for whom medical assistance is only as far away as the Little Chute Fire Department.

Lamers said the vehicle, purchased with 50 per cent federal civil defense funding, is primarily for transporting firemen and equipment to fires and for rescue work, such as freeing victims from wrecked cars and buildings. "It's not a medical rescue unit," Lamers emphasized.

"If his (Baulch's) trailer had tipped over we're equipped to right it and rescue them," Lamers said.

He said he had advised Baulch firemen could not help his choking daughter. "Doctors have told us not to put pressure oxygen on a person who is choking," Lamers told a reporter Tuesday.

There is a resuscitator in the van, Lamers said, and firemen probably would respond to a heart attack case where oxygen is needed. He said the rescue squad responded to about three calls over the past year.

Baulch believes oxygen would have helped his daughter. "They could have at least come out," he said.

"I wouldn't have touched the girl if we had gone out there," Lamers said. Little Chute firemen aren't trained like ambulance attendants and there is the possibility of doing more harm than good, he explained.

Since the vehicle is not rigged to transport patients, personnel manning it do not have to meet the same Emergency Medical Technician (EMT) requirements as ambulance attendants under a state law that takes effect Jan. 1.

Firemen have no intention, at this point, of taking EMT training, which involves at least 80 hours under formal, physician-directed programs at St. Elizabeth Hospital or Fox Valley Technical Institute.

The firemen all have jobs and couldn't take time off for the training, he said.

The situtation would be different, he ex-

Public works budget over $8 million

BY FRANK CHURCH
Post-Crescent staff writer

The Appleton Finance Committee pushed total public works expenditures up another percentage point Tuesday to a record $8,003,008.

Despite the huge figure, however, the budget attracted the ire of some officials and others attending Tuesday's finance committee review session. They decried the budget's nearly total lack of new construction.

The committee withstood most of the calls for new projects or changes in the list of projects already scheduled — especially in the case of concrete paving — and recommended approval of a budget nearly indentical to that recommended by Mayor James Sutherland.

The total public works expenditures are up 40 per cent over the projected spending for this year, $5,731,551, and compare with only $4,158,818 in public works expenditures in 1973.

Persistent pressure from Ald. Orville Strutz (17th) got committee members to add new curb and gutter and asphalt street construction for Meade Place at a total cost of $5,760. Also added to Sutherland's executive budget was $2,220 for curb and gutter construction along a portion of River Road.

Subtracted from the budget was $2,520 for concrete pavement along a 70-foot stretch of Arlington Street, which Ald. Glenn Thompson (13th), in whose ward the project would take place, said would be "ridiculous" to carry out without another pavement project nearby that Sutherland eliminated from the public works department's initial request.

Aldermen argued long and strenuously over which streets should be paved first. In the end, Sutherland's choices — which he admitted might be improved with a more careful analysis by public works — were upheld by the committee.

The Tuesday session also saw the first "no" vote cast by a member of the finance committee. Ald. Beverly Wieckert (11th) dissented on the vote approving the concrete paving budget of $624,330 after she was unsuccessful in her attempt to get Public Works Director Robert Miller to draw up a list of the most economical and necessary paving projects for the committee.

Sutherland said his request for a priority list from Miller was never answered, but he said Tuesday that he would still like to see such a list.

He outlined how he picked the paving projects to put in his executive budget — which was about half the list submitted by public works based on aldermen's requests alone — but the method did not satisfy several aldermen still pushing for street construction in their wards. Wieckert's suggestion that Miller draw up a list — based on finance committee guidelines designed to take the politics out of it — was brushed aside by the committee. There were indications that some policy for determining which streets get paved first in the future might be drawn up before next year's budget, however.

Ald. Edward Maloney (9th), pushing for the addition of two concrete streets in his ward that were chopped out of the budget by Sutherland, said concrete

Board OKs '75 budget in Kimberly

KIMBERLY — The village board has approved a tentative 1975 budget calling for expenditures of $2,032,251. This is $22,673 less than the 1974 figure.

In 1974 the tax levy amounted to $1,518,722, while the levy for 1975 was set at $1,398,883. Taxes will not necessarily be less next year, however, because with the loss of machinery and equipment assessment to the state, the general property taxpayer assumes a greater share of the budget levy.

Officials emphasize that the budget figures are strictly estimates until the village gets official word on what state aids can be anticipated. Last year the tax rate was $50 per $1,000 with a state tax credit of $7. State tax credit is expected to be lower in 1975.

The village anticipates $91,543 from the state for a refund on the manufacturing and equipment exemption which, if added to the 1975 levy, would make that total $1,490.426, still below the 1974 levy.

General government costs increased from $100,429 to $116,444; protection to persons and property from $113,700 to $130,503; health costs from $118,810 to $120,510; education, recreation and library from $81,050 to $90,750; highways and service garage costs from $156,340 to $165,550; unclassified from $92,225 to $97,000 and outlays from $100,000 to $106,500.

Indebtedness declined from $134,662 to $123,504. State and county taxes are expected to drop from $277,588 to $220,000 and school expenditures from $880,118 to $861,600.

Revenues anticipated from other than the tax levy amount to $541,825 in 1975 compared to $536,201 in 1974.

Village Clerk Kathryn Lochschmidt pointed out that the property tax levy of $1,398,883, the $91,543 machinery and equipment tax exemption from the state and the $273,300 in state shared taxes anticipated for 1975 are all subject to change.

'Everyone's stupid about something'

BY KATHY WALSH
Post-Crescent staff writer

MENASHA — "Everyone's stupid about something," Marcel Kinsbourne told an audience of 100 parents, professionals and students Tuesday afternoon. When he dared anyone to say differently, none could disagree.

Kinsbourne, a noted neurologist, psychologist and pediatrician with a prolific background of experience and published works, delivered the keynote address during a learning disabilities workshop entitled "What's the Matter With My Kid?" and sponsored by the Winnebago County Association for Mental Health.

Adults, he said, are more talented in some areas than others, namely the verbal, spacial, numerical and musical aspects of "intelligence." The same goes for children.

"We have to realize that different facets are differently represented in each one of us," he said.

Kinsbourne then turned his attention to the "substantial number of children who experience unexpected problems in school," those normal appearing students who go to school wanting to learn, but can't. He explained that he was not referring to those children suffering from major handicaps such as cerebral palsy or mental retardation, but rather those children no one "would have guessed would fail."

People are confused and bewildered by this phenomenon but shouldn't be, since everyone learns at a different pace. Just as children learn to walk or reach puberty at different times, some early and some late, so also does their learning readiness vary, said Kinsbourne.

"Society's exact expectations don't take into account normal human variations," he noted, saying the kind of behavior on which educators and clinicians judge the intelligence of preschoolers is not the kind of behavior on which they judge a first grader.

A child may fail in first grade because he is not ready and his "mental equipment is not yet operational. But that's no mystery if we accept human beings as different," he said.

In order to determine whether or not a child has a learning disability, those involved must ask a number of questions with the individual child's strengths and weaknesses in mind.

Often, parents and professionals decide the child with a learning disability must have some sort of brain damage.

A physician's explanation of a child's disruptive behavior and failure in school may be called minimal brain dysfunction, which in effect is saying "something is wrong with the brain," said Kinsbourne. "You could have told the doctor that, which only goes to show how minimal is the physicians' understanding of the situation."

An explanation of this sort can have a bad effect on parents who then think they have come to some understanding of the problem, when, in fact, they have achieved none.

The term carries with it a feeling of irreversible finality, giving parents an excuse for not trying, he said.

To base the cause of a learning disability on biological data such as pre-natal care, family genes or brain waves is of no use to the child either, he emphasized.

The problem has to be investigated in terms of the child's learning difficulties at a certain point in time, Kinsbourne explained. Is the child being adequately taught? Educational standards vary from school to school.

Is the child being adequately motivated? "In some homes literacy is part of an alien culture. Does the child see his parents read"? Parents think they are motivating their children often make comments like "We keep telling him to learn to read," which only adds to the pressure placed on a child.

He added that parents and teachers may set standards which are too high for the child to reach at a particular time. "What parents recognize as adequate achievement is often what they project for the child's future."

Sometimes a child's school failure is the result of a discipline complaint from a teacher. Not every child can get along with every teacher, he said, a fact that many teachers are unwilling to admit.

In such a case, Kinsbourne recommended that a child, whose personality clashes with that of his teacher, should be removed from that classroom.

According to Kinsbourne, a student's underachievement is a flaw in teaching, not learning. "If a child is two years behind, something two years ago was not explained to the child or he didn't understand the explanation, because it wasn't explained right for him."

He said there are several "steps" to an explanation, one of which won't do for everyone. Explanations must be explicit, because to omit a logical step is to set a child back.

Kinsbourne noted that there are dozens of different learning disability programs and all work in most cases because they have one ingredient in common — individualized attention.

In dealing with children who have a learning disability, he said, " You have to find a different avenue into his head. If you use a different approach, the child will usually learn."

Reasons which may be blocking a child's progress and cause him to be restless or inattentive in the classroom are many. The most common, however, stem from a child being placed in a class at the wrong level for him, the material is either too hard or too easy, the child is anxious, or the child is hyperactive.

Some children should be held back if they're not functioning at the level of classmates, he said. "If he's a failure, it's better to feel like a failure than to pretend he's not a failure."

Kinsbourne also differentiated between slow and remedial learners. A slow learner, he explained learns at a slow pace generally in all areas and needs a "slow teacher," while a remedial learner behaves like a slow learner, but "if given the right treatment will shift gears to normalcy."

He added, "If you let the child mature, not be upset and keep parents, peers and teachers off his back maybe he will relate in time." He encouraged teachers to reinforce what they teach continuously, "teach as much as you can and let time pass."

UWFV expansion vote delayed in Winnebago

OSHKOSH — There will be a delay of at least six weeks in the Winnebago County board's decision on whether an additional 10 acres of land will be purchased to provide for future expansion of the University of Wisconsin -Fox Valley Campus.

Instead of reconsidering its action of two weeks ago, when it turned down the move by an 18-23 vote, the board decided to go along with a recommendation from Supv. George Christoph to appoint a special study committee.

But, despite the delay, there's still hope, which likely would not have been the case had the board opted for reconsideration during its session Monday night.

It was a shrewd parliamentary move by Supv. Roland Kampo which essentially ruled out any hope of having money for the county's share of the $100,000 land purchase placed in the 1975 budget.

Although Kampo had voted for the purchase the first time around, last week during a finance committee meeting he informally indicated that he would not vote the same way again. By excluding it from the budget document, Kampo can avoid having to change his vote since chances of getting the necessary two-thirds vote are extremely slim even it he votes in favor of it.

Supv. David Nobbe, Neenah, who voted against the purchase in the previous action, had intended to ask for reconsideration prior to adoption of the budget. Had he succeeded, a simple majority vote of the board would have been all that was needed to to pass it.

Kampo, however, quickly asked that the budget resolution be moved up on the agenda before Nobbe could ask for reconsideration. By adopting the budget first, a two-thirds majority is now needed to spend money which is not included in the budget document. Campus Dean Rue Johnson urged the board to reconsider its action and spend the money to buy the land so that it would be there when and if expansion was needed.

He pointed out that the campus serves a contingent of students which might not attend college otherwise. The students can live at home while attending school, which is more economical than attending at University campuses at either Oshkosh or Green Bay. The board also received a petition signed by some 1,200 persons urging the supervisors to reconsider and authorize the land purchase.

During the board's reserved time for public appearances, it was pointed out that several students were in the gallery and perhaps wanted to voice their feelings.

However, Supv. Clarence Loehning, Neenah, said, "Mr. Chairman, I didn't come here tonight to listen to students. Discussion can only be heard on resolutions that are in our packet." Several days prior to each board meeting, an envelope containing all resolutions scheduled to come before the board are sent out and debate usually centers around those items which are on the agenda.

Johnson, however, was given time to talk and he explained that purchasing the land would be a good indication to the University Board of Regents that Winnebago and Outagamie counties were committed to the campus and could insure continued University support.

Currently the two counties pay costs of maintaining the physical plant while the University system provides all program financing.

The additional 10 acres, which is now under option at $10,000 an acre, is available through a land contract at 4 per cent interest.

Johnson explained that the land likely would be used to construct a physical education facility at an estimated cost of $350,000. However, he stressed that "all we're asking for at the present time is the land purchase, not funds for the facility."

Christoph asked if the county could ever get its money back if the University system decided to assume control of all two-year campuses.

Johnson responded that the "chances are politically excellent" that the county would. "I don't think the legislature would absorb $30 million worth of county property without some type of reimbursement."

Christoph, calling for the board chairman to appoint a special study committee, explained, "I'm still not satisfied. I'd like to see a complete study of the expansion program."

At the end of the meeting, when the action to appoint the committee came on a 23-14 vote (Kampo by this time had left to attend a Town of Menasha board meeting) Supv. Archie Daggett, one of the campus trustees, asked, "Why haven't we heard a move for reconsideration?

"I'm disappointed," Daggett said, readily agreeing with County Board Chairman James Coughlin that he (Daggett) had been "out-maneuvered by Kampo."

But he added, "Iguess a half a loaf is better than none," conceding that the hope now rests on the committee's findings.

Tuesday, Coughlin said he would appoint the study group this week and indicated that it might include the board's building and grounds committee, plus four interested citizens from the Neenah-Menasha area.

Tax base boost brings dip in FVTI's mill rate

Thanks to an increase in the tax base of the Fox Valley Vocational-Technical District, the mill rate will drop once more, as it has annually since the district was organized six years ago.

The rate was set this week by the Fox Valley Technical Institute administration and will go out to the 132 taxing units today.

The mill rate will be 87.26 cents for $1,000 of equalized valuation. This is a drop from 93.81 cents per $1,000 of equalized value a year ago.

The FVTI board, which adopted the final budget of $8.421 million a month ago, could not set the levy because the state had not provided the tax base figures for the district at that time. That tax base, received a few days ago, stands at $3.521 billion. That compares to $3.249 billion a year ago.

Of the $8.421 million budget, $3.072 million has to be raised through local taxation. The rest comes from state and federal funds, as well as tuition, interest income and miscellaneous incomes.

Last year's budget was $7.341 million, with $3.049 million coming from the local tax levy.

Some common sense about cars.

Buying a new car now is a good investment. For you and for our economy.

Compared to earlier models, our new cars conserve valuable fuel. A breakthrough in emissions control gives better performance and more miles per gallon. New cars require less scheduled maintenance, so they cost less to operate. And with today's higher used car values, the amount needed to buy a new car is lower than most people think.

When you buy a new car, you help America's economy. Your purchase can contribute to growth for the nation. It can pay off in more jobs, more revenue for government. more strength for businesses—large and small. This helps everyone.

Right now is the time to buy a new car. It's a common-sense investment for you and for our country.

Public works budget. . .

paving project requests should be based on how long the street has been ready for work after grading and graveling.

He said his two had been graded and graveled in 1967. Some of those left in the budget by Sutherland, he said, were graded in 1970.

Ald. William Ridgely (20th) said he had a street that's been waiting even longer that was eliminated by Sutherland, but decried the process now used for getting streets paved.

He called it "pure lunacy."

Sutherland's public works budget, besides being the highest ever, is dominated almost entirely by reconstruction. Grading and graveling for new streets — which amounted to $218,841 in this year's budget — was eliminated by Sutherland. All sanitary sewer work is reconstruction, although there is a $1,191,279 budget for new storm sewer construction, the highest account in the budget.

Sutherland told the committee Tuesday that the budget pressures facing the city in 1975 "are going to force us into a philosophical examination of the question of growth," and whether the city should continue to expand its streets, sewers and sidewalks and emphasize, instead, a program to better maintain existing facilities.

The mayor's suggestion that the committee discuss the question of future city growth was largely ignored, however, as aldermen spent most of their time battling for streets they would like to see in their own wards.

Percy Menning, a resident, tried to get the committee to restore grading and graveling and new sewer work for an area he is trying to get developed on the north side, but the finance committee turned down him and most of the other aldermen seeking additions to the budget.

Some highlights of the budget approved by the finance committee Tuesday were:

— $175,000 to paint the Memorial Drive bridge.

— Nothing in an account set aside for the Oneida Street high level bridge, which could be ready for construction late next year. If the state approves its share of the funding for the structure, the city could sell bonds to finance its share.

— Nothing for reconstruction of the Water Street retaining wall, which Miller said appears to be less needed than was originally thought.

A preliminary report from a consulting firm doing soil tests in the area of the wall, which lies at the bottom of the hill on which the old vocational school is built and where officials hope to see apartment construction some day, indicates the problem with poor soils and hill slippage in the area "is not as serious as they appear on face value."

Some $60,000 had been inserted into Miller's initial budget request for design of a Water Street retaining wall, but was removed from Sutherland's executive budget at Miller's request because the project did not carry sufficient urgency.

— Reconstruction of Lawrence Avenue-Durkee Street from Memorial Drive to College Avenue and College Avenue, from Badger Avenue to Richmond Street, both of which will be carried out with large chunks of federal aid.

Preparatory work is also scheduled for the reconstruction of Oneida Street, from Seymour Street to the south city limits, Appleton-Pacific streets, from Lawrence to Oneida, and Meade Street, from College to Hancock, all of which are scheduled for construction in 1976.

Preparatory work is also in the budget for the reconstruction of Oneida Street, from Lawrence to Wisconsin Avenue, and Franklin Street, from Drew Street to Lawe Street, both of which are scheduled for construction in 1977.

The committee will resume its budget deliberations tonight, with budgets for park and recreation departments, personnel, welfare, health and redevelopment on tap.

Recreation Supv. Lloyd Koehnke already had urged the committee to restore $15,000 for a parking lot for the Langedyke Park softball fields that was removed by Sutherland in his executive budget. Koehnke said the item is top priority.

Other matters discussed during Tuesday's debate of public works expenditures:

— Talk of wastepaper recycling was quelled by officials who said the price of wastepaper has dropped drastically in recent months and is no longer a marketable item for recycling.

Miller said, however, that there is a good market for corrugated cardboard. The city used to pick it up from commercial establishments, he said, but the price increase has prompted stores to contract with recyclers to make a profit on the waste product.

— Miller said the city's old Mackville sanitary landfill — annexed to the city earlier this year from the Town of Center — would be an "excellent nucleus" for a future recreational area.

A golf course? several aldermen, who are golfers themselves, chimed.

"We don't want to have to cut it," said Thompson, of the grass that the city must plant on the 40-acre landfill site as part of the reclamation procedure it must follow to comply with state orders.

"We ought to get an article in 'Nation's Cities' for this," said one alderman, after listening to the rigorous standards the city must meet in restoring the landfill site for future use.

— There will be savings in manpower as a result of the city's taking its garbage to the Outagamie County solid waste shredder Miller said. About two men will be freed from work at the landfill site to do other jobs.

Better street sweeping will be one result, Miller told the committee, noting the large labor pool allocation to that budget.

Ald. Roylance Pointer (14th) said the city is already pretty clean and wondered if more had to be done.

"You'll have to tell us how clean you want the streets and we'll do it," Miller responded.

— The savings in manpower as a result of the landfill prompted Wieckert to ask how the city could start eliminating unnecessary personnel.

ing. "I hate to think the area is apathetic," Miss Ciske said.

She's sure there are many other people who feel as strongly as she does about enforcing the nonsmokers' bill of rights.

Nonsmokers must unite and voice their concerns over the injustices being done them by people who do smoke, Miss Ciske said.

But GASP shouldn't be tagged with the image of the Women's Christian Temperance Union or a bunch of Carrie Nations, she said.

"We don't want the public to say 'here they come'," she told the tiny gathering. "We want to unite but we don't want to man the light brigade."

Miss Ciske wants to approach the effort carefully. Maybe even a little lighthearted at times, she explained. "It's like dealing with overweight people. You just don't go up to someone and tell them 'you're fat'."

Mrs. Hoffman warned against being "too mild." Firmness is needed. "You've got to hit them right between the eyes."

GASP, begun in Maryland by a group of housewives, aims at educating the public about the danger of smoke to nonsmokers, to encourage people not to smoke in public places and to urge public establishments either to disallow smoking on their premises or provide segregated facilities for their smoking and nonsmoking patrons.

GASP targets on such public places as hospitals, restaurants, auditoriums and libraries in attempting to preserve the right of the nonsmoker to breath smoke-free air.

Miss Ciske said queries were sent area hospitals in an attempt to determine what they are doing or plan to do for nonsmoking patients and visitors. One hospital didn't even respond and replies received from some others reflected disinterest, she remarked.

Hoffman was upset because state laws against smoking in some types of public places is not enforced. He said he saw cigarette ashes dropped on meat in a grocery store the other day.

"People who smoke are bent on a type of suicide," Mrs. Hoffman believed.

Mrs. Kaplan suggested writing a local state legislator for a clarification on no smoking laws.

Mrs. Hoffman agreed to undertake that job and Miss Ciske will call attention to the plight of nonsmokers by trying to get a Green Bay television station to do a story on the problems.

Miss Ciske said the no smoking signs she placed in several locations at the paper company laboratory where she works have had the desired effect.

She received help from the Wisconsin Lung Association when she wrote the organization recently, seeking literature and posters. She said she decided about six months ago to be a nonsmoker activist.

Hoffman, an Appleton store owner, believed that while some merchants may not like smoking in their places, they don't get tough because they're afraid of losing business.

the real cross-section of the community?" he asked.

Redevelopment Director Eric Hemphill pointed out that federal community development rules require certain means of involving the public in housing and development plans — but with safeguards against outright takeover of a project by a citizen organization.

Hemphill said federal regulations require publication of the objectives and amount of funds available, involvement of citizens in acquiring the funds and presentation of plans to the public at hearings.

Member Lonnie Iris proposed relying on hearings to draw interested persons, who could then be invited to form a citizens' panel. He questioned the need to go too deeply into citizen involvement before the funds have been received.

Hemphill said public hearings are the initial means of involving citizens in the planning process, followed by working with "some structured group" which is set up to be as representative as possible of the community.

Minahan said he raised the question only to prompt discussion Tuesday. He said he and Hemphill will present more clear-cut proposals at the next session, tentatively set for Dec. 10.

Formal action Tuesday was confined to the re-election of Minahan and McKenzie and to authorizing Hemphill to hire a secretary if he finds a suitable one before the next meeting. He was given permission previously to interview applicants for the secretary's post and for a job as his assistant.

Besides preparing the federal fund application, work on the Redevelopment Project No. 1 plan to build high-rise apartments on the Appleton Vocational School site is a major reason both for hiring additional staff and seeking more city funds.

ARA activities are financed three-fourths by private pledges from industries forming Project 76, Inc. and one-fourth by city tax dollars.

According to Hemphill's financial report, of an original $83,000 pledged, it has been necessary to call for only $40,670 from Project 76 so far. He said that of that sum, $21,150 is still on hand in savings accounts and certificates. Of the city's $25,000 pledged during the first two years of operations, Hemphill said, the agency spent only part of the first year's contribution and none of this year's.

If a redevelopment project gets under way, the agency may need cash quickly to assemble property and pay other expenses, members reasoned. Pointer suggested rather than merely asking the City Council to carry forward the same $25,000 it budgeted this year, the ARA should ask for an additional $25,000 for next year. Unspent funds which would normally go into the general fund of the city at year-end should be reappropriated, to produce a $50,000 total next year, he suggested. Commissioners agreed informally and Pointer said that as a council member he will carry the message to budget meetings being held this week.

Hemphill pointed out that another potential source of funds is from the federal housing and development act itself. Up to 10 per cent of the city's entitlement funds — in Appleton's case about $30,000 — could be received in advance to pay the expense of applying for the other 90 per cent, he said.

Minahan said that should be done, and Hemphill replied, "I expect that we will be in there with an application."

Minahan also reported that he and Hemphill met earlier Tuesday with regional representatives of the J.C. Penney Co. While no commitments were expected nor given by the company officials, Minahan told commissioners, "There was nothing in the meeting that discouraged us."

The ARA and other local officials are attempting to interest Penney's and Sears, Roebuck & Co. officials in building larger stores downtown, as part of a redevelopment program aimed at preventing the business district's health from being eroded by outlying development.

plained, if Little Chute, like Shiocton, was far away from full-time ambulance service and hospitals. But both are nearby, he said. Kaukauna and Appleton have good ambulance services, he said.

Little Chute firemen have only basic, Red Cross first aid training, Lamers said.

In order to qualify for funding for the light duty rescue truck, the firemen had to have light rescue training, said Howard Rathbun, Outagamie County director of emergency government, who helped get the money for the van.

EMT training isn't necessary, Rathbun said, "but it would be nice."

Baulch believes the fire department should have qualified first aid personnel by investing a little more money "or inform the people otherwise."

The time wasted finding out firemen won't assist could mean the difference between life and death, he believed.

Lamers said there has been little pressure from the townspeople to expand fire department medical rescue services.

The rescue van, which replaced a panel truck, measures 23 feet long, 11 feet high and eight feet wide. It goes to all fires in the village Lamers said, and carries firemen that before had to crowd onto the village fire truck or take their own cars.

decision."

Ripp urged full funding for Big Brothers, saying it was the "best preventative program we have. Don't restrict it." Verstegen also defended it on the grounds that it was the only juvenile deliquency prevention program in operation in the county.

The funds are used to do screening investigations of the men who volunteer to be big brothers.

The only change made in the finance recommendations on law enforcement and courts budgets was to restore $550 to the sheriff's budget to purchase one electric typewriter. Sheriff Calvin Spice had requested three electric typewriters and all three had been cut by Woehler and the finance committee.

A finance committee recommendation that a $3,000 seminar fund request by Judge Nick Schaefer be cut to $1,500 was approved, but an effort by Supv. George Kroes to further cut it to $500 failed.

The money was to cover Schaefer's attendance at a four-week judges school and a one-week conference for himself and Mark Van Thiel, coordinator for the Volunteers in Probation program. The finance committee had reasoned that only one person should attend at county expense.

Kroes, chairman of the highway committee, claimed that the county is "paying the judges enough that we don't have to pay their vacation in Florida." He argued that the judges "should be treated like the rest of the county employes. This is just a $3,000 vacation."

Three months ago the board failed to act on a highway committee request to pay the expenses of Highway Commissioner Clarence Brownson to attend a convention in Portland, Ore., which he plannned to attend while on vacation.

The department of social services budget as approved by the board now stands at $1,030,606 for administration and service programs funded under that listing. This is $96,798 more than recommended in Woehler's executive budget. Revenues for administration were set at $914,173, a drop of $18,916.

Other major budgets approved so far include:

District attorney, $111,459, unchanged from executive budget; drug investigation squad, $36,570, unchanged; County Court Branch 1, $37,444, unchanged; Branch 2, $98,097, down $1,500; Branch 3, $82,327, unchanged; Circuit Court, $49,431, unchanged;

Register in probate, $50,688, unchanged; sheriff, $240,654, down $50; traffic police, $302,869, down $16,957 (duplication of funds eliminated); police radio, $104,555, unchanged; process server, $28,757, unchanged, and jail, $113,623, unchanged.

Mine operators make new offer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Coal mine operators produced a new contract offer, dramatically brightening the outlook for settling a nationwide coal strike that triggered thousands of layoffs in other industries during its first day.

Union and industry negotiators, emerging early today from a 12-hour bargaining session, indicated they are close to agreement.

Harry Patrick, United Mine Workers secretary-treasurer, said the proposal was "pretty good." Chief industry negotiator Guy Farmer said it "could settle the contract."

UMW President Arnold Miller said union leaders were studying the proposal and would resume negotiations later today.

The industry made its proposal late Tuesday night as the day-old strike tightened its grip on the already weakening economy. U.S. Steel Corp., the nation's biggest producer, announced a 25 per cent production cutback and said it would lay off 13,700 employes this week. Major railroads furloughed more than 2,000 workers.

The giant Tennessee Valley Authority, with only a 44-day coal reserve, called for a voluntary cutback in electricity use in its seven-state power area. It asked for a 50 per cent reduction in street lighting, shorter business hours, a ban on outdoor electrical advertising and the lowering of thermostats to 65 degrees.

In the coal fields, striking miners debated how long they could hold out without paychecks or strike benefits, which the UMW does not pay.

The strike, which began officially at 12:01 a.m. Tuesday, shut down mines producing 70 per cent of the nation's coal. Even if a tentative agreement was reached this week, the UMW said it would take at least two weeks to get a new contract ratified and to put the mines to work again.

Farmer described the new industry offer as "a complete, total package," which was put forth "not as a bargaining gambit" but as a proposal "that could settle the contract."

Patrick agreed, saying it put both sides "closer together than ever before" after nine weeks of negotiations. "At this point, I'm very, very optimistic that we can wrap this thing up very soon," he told newsmen.

Although both sides have almost continually expressed optimism over the chances of a settlement, sources close to the talks indicated the new offer represented a final push by the operators "to close out the contract."

Details of the proposal were not disclosed, but officials on both sides have indicated the final settlement would range in excess of a 40 per cent increase in wages and benefits over three years.

Consumers Congress.

Because the council can't roll back wage or price increases, public hearings are its only recourse short of requesting a personal appeal from President Ford to bring business or labor into line.

Some food chains have discarded the practice of marking up prices of items on the shelf.

"We want to get them to say why they've announced their policy and find out why some of the other chains have not announced such a policy," Rees said in an interview.

But the witness list included no chains still marking up shelf items.

A council spokesman explained that the list of industry witnesses was prepared by the National Association of Food Chains. An association spokesman said it had "no particular motivation" for not including representatives of stores that mark up shelf prices.

"This is adequate as far as we're concerned," said the council spokesman.

Rees has said the hearings are part of a larger investigation into the price increases tacked on by supermarkets, wholesalers and other middlemen as food moves from the farm to shopping bags.

Profits of major food chains are up by 115 per cent from a year ago. Rees has estimated that middleman markups in the same period have jumped by 15 per cent for beef, 194 per cent for navy beans and 303 per cent for sugar.

But Clarence Adamy, president of the food chains association, said in a news conference Tuesday that even if supermarkets returned their profits to shoppers, it would save food buyers only 36 cents a week on the average family food bill.

Congress

staffs came up with three alternatives.

The first would give congressmen a $10,000 raise next January, to $52,500, which would go to $55,400 in 1976 and $55,400 in 1977. The present $60,000 salary for Cabinet officers and Congress' top leaders would go to $63,300 in 1976 and $66,800 in 1977.

Under the second proposal congressmen's pay would go to $47,500 by next year and $55,400 by 1977. Cabinet officers' would stay at $60,000 through 1976 and then go to $63,300.

The third proposal would give congressmen $46,800 next year and $56,200 by 1977. Cabinet officers would get $63,300 next year and $70,500 by 1977.

Last March, the Senate not only rejected a pay raise for congressmen but also efforts to separate federal judges and supervisors so they could get a raise without Congress' getting one.

That raise had been proposed by former President Richard M. Nixon under the regular procedure for presidential recommendations on raises every four years. The next such recommendations don't come until 1975.

The last pay raise for top echelon career federal workers came in 1969. Since then cost of living increases should have taken their pay to $46,000, but a freeze has kept them at the same $36,000 level which section chiefs under them are paid.

Taxpayers subsidize reports, Proxmire says

WASHINGTON (AP) — American taxpayers are paying $2.44 billion this year to subsidize export of U.S. products, Sen. William Proxmire said today, calling it a misuse of public funds.

Proxmire, vice chairman of the Congressional Joint Economic Committee, issued a statement saying, "At a time of rampant inflation in this country, part of which is due to a shortage of goods, the U.S. government is spending nearly $2.5 billion to encourage exporters to send more goods out of the country and to encourage companies to conduct their business abroad.

"This is absurd policy and misuse of the taxpayers' money," the Wisconsin Democrat said.

Proxmire drew his figures from an updated study of subsidy programs prepared by the staff of the joint committee.

The study showed that while direct export payments have dropped to zero from $106 million in 1970, subsidies in the form of tax breaks for U.S. companies operating abroad have increased from $335 million to $1.5 billion.

Proxmire said many of the export subsidies were started when the United States maintained a fixed gold value of the dollar and the overvalued dollar made it difficult to sell American goods abroad.

"Today this is no longer true," Proxmire said. "The value of the dollar is set in the open market. This justification for export subsidies is no longer valid."

Draft of women as well as men seen by Froehlke

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Former Secretary of the Army Robert Froehlke predicted Tuesday night that a "universal draft" would be established in the United States before the end of the decade.

Froehlke, now a Stevens Point, Wis., insurance executive, said universal service, as he sees it, would involve both young men and women after they completed high school. He said such service would give young people a chance to learn discipline, but also provide them an opportunity to interact with others.

"I include anything that will serve our fellow men, anything that is selfless—Peace Corps, VISTA, hospitals, religious missionaries," he told members of the the Milwaukee Society of Professional Journalists-Sigma Delta Chi.

Froehlke, who served in his Army post from 1971-73, said military officials had accepted the political decision for a voluntary army.

"They have made it work spectacularly," he said. "It can work in the future if taxpayers are willing to spend the billions of dollars to make it work."

But he said a draft which would ensure universal service would be preferable.

"We need a cross section or risk the 'man on a white horse' development which might result if any special disproportionate segment of society should enter the military and eventually dominate it," he said.

The journalists were told that, besides initiation of universal service, other reasons which could lead to resurrection of Selective Service draft would be a war or an appeal by politicians who promised huge savings to taxpayers by eliminating the need to attract volunteer servicemen with high wages.

Froehlke conceded he did not believe universal service would be adopted during the next session of Congress.

"But we must start talking about it now if we expect to see it come, and I believe that will come in the late 1970s," he said.

Ulasewicz describes how hush money was channeled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retired New York City detective Anthony T. Ulasewicz described in rapid-fire, deadpan fashion at the Watergate cover-up trial today how he clandestinely dispensed $217,000 to the original Watergate defendants.

With almost no expression to his voice, Ulasewicz said that throughout most of the three months he was making the cash deliveries, he cautioned Herbert W. Kalmbach that there was something illegal or improper about the payoffs.

In his thick New York accent, Ulasewicz detailed the covert use of telephone booths, cover names and secret delivery points used to deliver the cash to the original seven Watergate defendants and their lawyers.

Ulasewicz described an Aug. 3, 1973, meeting with Kalmbach, once former President Nixon's personal attorney, at the Orange County, Calif., airport where he was to receive a $75,000 cash delivery.

Ulasewicz said he told Kalmbach, "Something here was not kosher. It went a little over his head. I felt it was becoming more improper with each sequence in spite of his assurances that there was nothing illegal."

Ulasewicz said he worried that Kalmbach apparently didn't have control over who received the money or for what purpose.

"Me being a New York City cop and he being the lawyer for the President, it was hard for me to tell him what was on my mind," the paunchy 56-year-old former investigator said.

Kalmbach began to cry Tuesday when he testified about his role in the money arrangements, and court was recessed to allow him to regain his composure.

Kalmbach later was grilled intensely by U.S. District Court John J. Sirica, who defended his interrogation by citing praise he received from an appeals court last week for his work in the first Watergate trial.

After dismissing the jury for the day, Sirica turned to Kalmbach, formerly Richard M. Nixon's personal lawyer, and fired 20 questions at him in drumbeat fashion, skeptically challenging his contention that he believed the money went only for humanitarian purposes.

Kalmbach had testified that not until September 1972 did he decide to stop raising funds.

Near the end of his interrogation, the 70-year-old Sirica looked down at Kalmbach and said:

"And yet you are telling this court and that jury that you never became suspicious that these payments were probably for illegal purposes, a cover-up, or other than these humanitarian purposes, until you finally decided to get out?"

Kalmbach answered that not until Ulasewicz warned him that the payments were not "kosher" did he believe there was anything improper.

When associate special prosecutor James F. Neal rose to interject a question, Sirica turned and said sternly, "I have a perfect right under the Liddy case or hundreds of other cases to get all the facts out ... regardless of who it might help or hurt."

St. Norbert College passes halfway mark of goal in fund drive

DE PERE — Contributions to the St. Norbert College Priorities Campaign have passed the halfway mark, according to James McKanna, campaign chairman.

A total of $4,706,387 in gifts and pledges has been received since the drive started a year ago. A $2 million bequest from the estate of the late Gertrude S. Bergstrom of Neenah has been the largest gift to the campaign.

The college is seeking $9.4 million for two new campus buildings and a substantial increase in the school's endowment. The planned construction includes a library-learning center and a physical education building, along with campus improvements. The funds are to be raised over three years.

J.C. Penney Co. to build at new Green Bay mall

GREEN BAY — The J.C. Penney Co. officially became a part of the Port Plaza downtown redevelopment project here with the signing of the lease Tuesday morning.

A spokesman for Development Control Corp., the firm handling leasing for the mall, said there is a better than 50-50 chance that construction will begin before the end of the year.

The Penney store will cover 160,000 square feet and will be a two-story structure. Its cost is estimated at between $2.4 million and $3.2 million.

The scheduled opening of the mall and the Penney store is set for the fall of 1976.

The Penney store will be the third major project in the mall. An eight-story building to house the First Wisconsin Bank of Green Bay on two floors and a 10-story apartment building are under construction and expected to open in 1975.

Prices up faster than incomes

BY JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — While inflation is to most people an enigma that leads to a dilemma, there are some especially confusing aspects of this year's economic performance — paradoxes, some might call them.

1. Wages are rising but spendable income is falling.

Many American families were slow to face up to or stare through this illusion. They saw that weekly paycheck growing larger, but they were reluctant to recognize that the numbers didn't mean what they did in 1972.

During 1970 through 1972, both wages and prices increased, but the former exceeded the latter. But since then prices have tended to rise faster than the increase in incomes.

To illustrate: In 1972 the average weekly earnings of production workers rose 7 per cent, or more than double the 3.3 per cent rise in the Consumer Price Index. In 1973 wages rose 6.3 per cent, prices 6.2.

This year the decline in wages versus prices has been pronounced, with average weekly earnings rising at a 7 per cent rate and consumer prices at more than 12.

2. Corporate profits are up, despite the erosion of economic activity. Don't believe it, say many businessmen.

Despite the downturn in the economy, it is true that one company after another has reported record high profits. If you took those figures at face value you might believe a boom existed.

The explanation, say businessmen and economists, lies in inflation itself. Many companies have large inventories of commodities in their warehouses, waiting to be manufactured into consumer and capital goods.

While these goods remain in their raw or semi-processed state, prices are rising. That means a company that bought a raw material at $1 a pound might find itself with an inventory value of $1.30. That's inventory profit.

First National City Bank estimates the value of inventories at the beginning of this year was about $250 billion, which makes a 1 per cent price increase amount to $2.5 billion. That's just for a 1 per cent increase — but the wholesale price index this year has risen at close to 30 per cent.

Eliminate those inventory profits, say the experts, and you'll find that a real squeeze is now being exerted on profit margins. And those inventory profits could indeed be eliminated by a reduction of inflation.

3. Families report they try to cut down on their spending but it doesn't seem to help.

It's true. You can behave in what you've been told is a sound and economical manner and still not see the results. The answer lies in the figures that make up the Consumer Price Index.

If you reviewed the prices of items in the CPI you'd find that the slowest risers are those items that we've probably cut down on already, the luxuries or at least the expendables. Movie cameras, for example, have fallen in price since 1967.

The big increases on the other hand are among necessities: potatoes, sugar, home heating oil, hospital rooms, legal services. And you can't cut back on them without serious and probably damaging consequences.

Courts

Sentencing will be Monday for Richard J. Van Daalwyk, 25, 818½ E. Minor St., who pleaded guilty Tuesday to two counts of theft.

Van Daalwyk admitted taking $50.76 on Oct. 28 and $24.03 on Oct. 31 from Schmidt Oil & Tire Co., 425 S. Washington St., Combined Locks, where he was employed.

Sentencing will be by Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

Gary J. Fryfogle, 21, 2921 N. Oneida St., was fined $100 Tuesday for disorderly conduct, stemming from a family fight at home Oct. 20, 1973.

Fryfogle pleaded guilty before Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

Thomas Maloney, 21, 2021 S. Oneida St., will be sentenced Monday for disorderly conduct, relating to an Oct. 12 arrest at a W. College Avenue tavern.

Police said the defendant appeared to be hiding in the bar after closing time and would not answer when called to come out. Maloney told Outagamie County Judge Nick F. Schaefer that he had fallen asleep in the tavern after being there during business hours.

Sentencing will be Monday for William Endres, 26, 505½ W. Atlantic St., for marijuana possession. Endres pleaded no contest Tuesday before Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

The defendant was arrested for public intoxication when found lying in the grass along Sherman Place last June 27. Police said they found some of the drug in Endres' possession during a routine search.

Peter D. Schilling, 23, 1714 N. Ullman St., was charged Tuesday with obstructing police at the scene of an auto accident near his home early Oct. 5.

Police charged that Schilling told them another man was driving the car which crashed when their evidence indicated that he was the driver.

Outagamie County Judge Nick F. Schaefer appointed the public defender to represent Schilling and he continued the case to next Monday.

Anthony Brockman, 21, 932 W. Oklahoma St., was charged Tuesday with disorderly conduct, stemming from an Oct. 19 incident outside a Freedom tavern.

Police claim the defendant refused to move from in front of a squad car when ordered to do so.

The case was continued to Monday by Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

A March 13 trial was set Tuesday for Jack Nabbefeld, 25, 1833 S. Walden Ave., accused of failing to pay wages for one of his employes.

The employe, Timothy J. Wolfgram, stated in the complaint that he began working at Nabbefeld's Clark Service Station, 409 E. Wisconsin Ave., Sept. 28, but was refused payment for his work since he made his initial inquiry for pay on Oct. 9.

The trial date was set by Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

HELP-MATE

HELP-MATE is a reader-action service to help all persons with consumer problems similar to those published in the column.

It is designed as a last resort for people who have exhausted other available means to obtain suitable action or information.

Letters of potentially broad interest are selected and edited from those received by this newspaper and other sources.

If you need information or assistance involving a widely used product or service, write to HELP-MATE, in care of The Post-Crescent.

The Post-Crscent will forward the letters to Consumer News, Inc., Washington, D. C. which will attempt to secure an answer to the problem.

Please provide all pertinent information, including COPIES (not originals) of key documents such as sales slips, warranties and letters.

HELP-MATE cannot return any material submitted, so please do not include stamps or return envelopes. But each letter will be considered in determining topics for investigation and action.

MOBILE HOME MAKER FIXES

I own a 1973 mobile home made by Redman Mobile Homes, Inc., which has numerous defects that I have been unable to have repaired by the dealer or Redman. There are holes in the screens, the roof rolls when the wind blows, some of the sliding panels are not adequately fastened, and there are other difficulties including leaks and doors that don't work. Altogether, 40 different problems need attention.

I have given the dealer four different lists, but managers have been changed continually, and I get nowhere. I contacted the manufacturer and have gotten some help, but most of the problems remain. After a year of runaround with these two outfits I've had it.

N.C.

Redman, a Dallas firm, has agreed to make all the repairs you requested. Buck Acuff, Redman's area service coordinator, says none of the conditions existed when the mobile home was delivered to the dealer, but because you have not gotten satisfaction from the dealer, Redman will do the work.

A spokesman of the Mobile Home Manufacturers Association advises that the selection of a mobile home dealer is as important as selection of the home itself. It is wise to ask a dealer for references and check his or her business reputation with the local Better Business Bureau or local bank.

The Association will assist in handling complaints of mobile home owners. Write: Virginia Clifton, MHMA, 14650 Lee Road, Chantilly, Va., 22021.

MISSING SLIDES NOW IN FOCUS

Last May, my wife brought our wedding slides to W.T. Grant (in Riverside, Ca.) to be made into 5 x 7 prints. These were the only pictures of our entire wedding. When two months had passed and Grant's had not received the slides or pictures back from GAF Photo Service in Los Angeles I filled out a tracer.

Since then I have written to GAF in L.A. and New York. Grant's has not been of any help and GAF says they are looking. My bride is at her wits end. Please help us.

T.L.

A spokesman for W.T. Grant said it had taken all possible steps to trace the slides, and it referred the matter to GAF. GAF did locate the enlargements that were made from your slides, and you now have the enlargements. GAF did not find the slides but has offered to make others from the prints.

ORDERS TO GEM COMPANY LOSE LUSTER

In October, 1973, I ordered a ring from the Diamex Gem Co., a branch of Diamaze Co., sending $13.95. In January, I received the ring after writing the company about it not coming. But I didn't like the ring, and I returned it. I did not get my money back, rather a gift check for $13.95. So, I ordered a watch for the check plus $3.

I have not received the watch even though the firm wrote twice in February saying it was coming. I wrote again in May, and a registered letter I sent to Diamaze in June was returned to me marked "unclaimed."

Any help would be greatly appreciated.

C.B.

Diamaze has been the subject of hundreds of complaints to New York consumer protection agencies. Most complaints charge slow or no delivery, according to an official of the Metropolitan New York Better Business Bureau.

In 1972, Diamaze signed an agreement with the Department of Consumer Affairs of the City of New York, promising to deliver merchandise within six weeks of an order or make a full refund, advise of an expected dealy or send substitute merchandise. In 1973, the Department of Consumer Affairs filed a second suit, charging delivery delays. This case has yet to be resolved.

Our letter to Howard Reinstein, president of Diamaze, went unanswered. When telephoned, Reinstein said the company gets a lot of mail, and letters don't always get replies if the desired action is being taken. He said the company is still in business, although it closed down this summer because business was slow.

He said delays in shipping have been caused by a burglary in which a large amount of merchandise was stolen. He maintained that although consumer agencies have received several hundred complaints, this is a small number compared to the 300,000 orders that have been filled over the last three years.

He asked that your complaint and another received recently by HELP-MATE be sent to his personal attention at 83-19 149th Ave., Howard Beach, N.Y. 11414. Persons who have written Diamaze without results may contact Al Yocono, Consumer Complaint Center, Department of Consumer Affairs, 80 LaFayette St., New York, N.Y. 10013.

NEW BEEFBITES DINNER.®
25% REAL BEEF.

The only one of these four with any beef.

New BEEFBITES DINNER is a dry dog food with 25% real beef quick-dried into every bite.

Those other dry foods don't have any beef at all. No beef, no meat and no meat by-products. Their ingredients may say "meat and bone meal." But that really means meat meal and bone meal, not meat. They may even look meaty or make gravy when you add water, but only new BEEFBITES DINNER has real beef.

And it has as much real beef as most canned dog foods.

For people who mix meat from a canned food with their dog's dry food, BEEFBITES DINNER is pre-mixed. Since it's dry with meat already in it, you don't have to mix it in yourself.

BEEFBITES DINNER may cost a little more than those other dry dog foods, but meat costs more than no meat. Try new BEEFBITES DINNER. It's a complete and balanced diet. And your dog will love it.

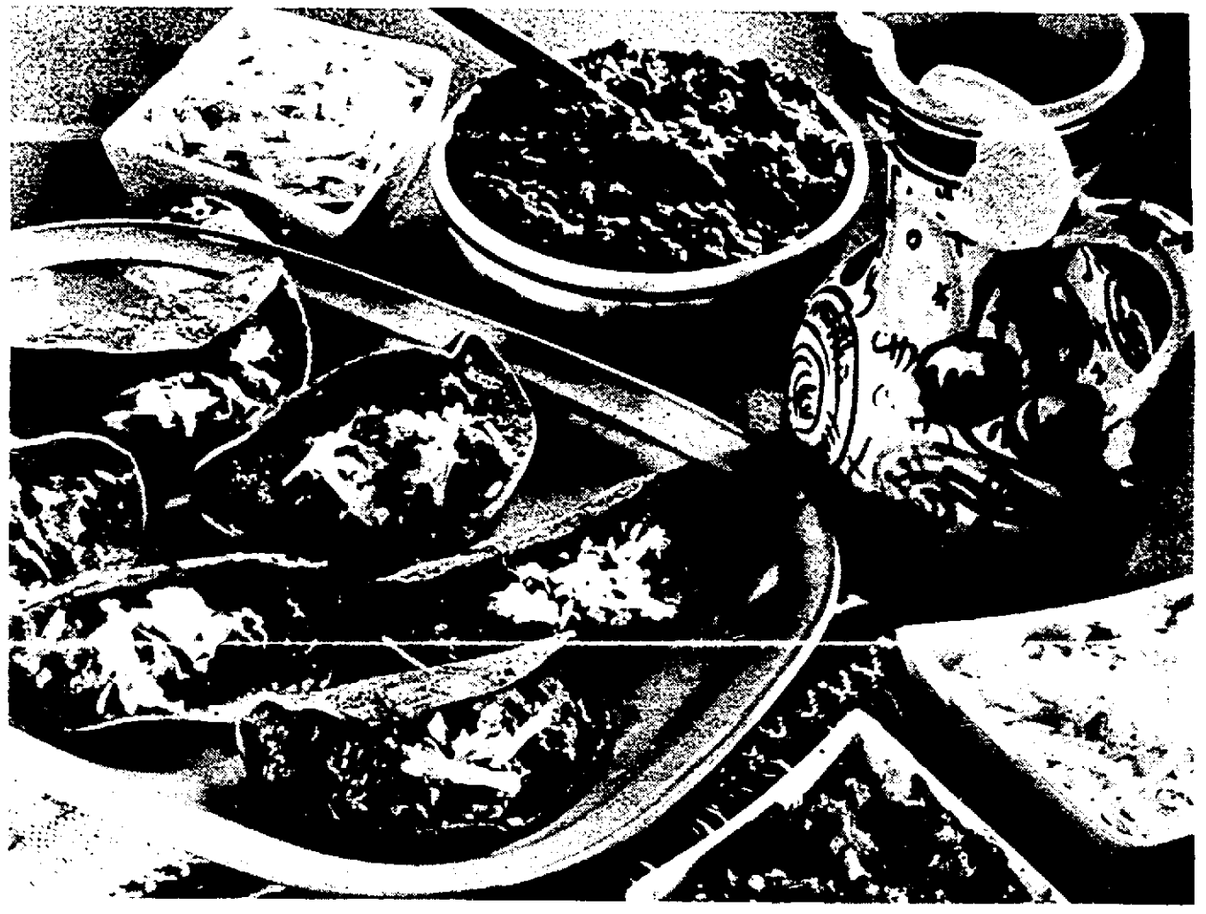
Meatloaf Stuffed Eggplant is an interesting way to serve the beautiful purple-shelled vegetable. Ground beef combines with the cooked diced eggplant, country-style mashed potato flakes for a light stuffing. The topping is mozzarella cheese and tomato sauce to make a budget dish that could become a family favorite.



Mexican-American Tacos are made easily with tortillas which are baked instead of being fried after they are filled with ground beef mixture. A worcestershire sauce dressing makes the Mexican-American Salad a perfect go-together with the tacos. Complete the menu with vanilla pudding topped with crushed pineapple, cookies and fruit punch.

Budget Foods can be Beautiful

Lillian Mackesy

POST-CRESCENT FOOD EDITOR

Let's face it. Food prices threaten the family food budget. And it looks as if the future will be worse rather than better. It may be true — and surely is — that the little old mustard seed used in our common table mustard has gone sky-high in price (tripled in the last 3 years), along with the preparation costs of the vinegar that goes with the seed to make the vinegar. That's only one example in the food industry, completely believable, yet doesn't change a thing on the home front. The homemaker's problem still remains — she has to feed her family. Her food dollar has to stretch to make ends meet; she has to set a table that holds nourishing food, enough food for health and, if possible, food that's pleasing to sight and taste. That's the why of today's recipe collection. It goes back to basic rules of thrift and back to "people" recipes evolved in pioneer households and in Old World kitchens until they have become traditional. There's a modern touch to some in that convenience ingredients have been utilized for the economy of the cook's time and the stove's energy. The basic rules are the same as always. 1) Use those foods in season, the plentifuls or specials (if too much gas isn't wasted in getting the plentifuls or specials). 2) Use the freezer for quantity dishes, but keep in mind that canned goods use less electrical energy and sometimes are available at an attractive price. Maybe freezer space is best used for other foods. 3) Take to meatless meals during the week, using protein substitutes and/or pasta, rice, vegetables in season or canned. 4) Learn ways of stretching meat so that a little bit will go a long way. 5) Know what you are buying by reading the label and knowing its unit price per serving.

It all adds up to sharp consumer buying and today's recipes fit that pattern. Try one or try them all, then keep those recipes which please the family pattern of eating.

MEATLOAF STUFFED EGGPLANT
1 large eggplant
Onion Salt
2 eggs
½ cup water
¾ cup mashed potato flakes
1 pound ground beef
½ cup shredded mozzarella cheese
1 can (8 oz.) tomato sauce

Cut eggplant in half lengthwise; place, cut side down, in shallow pan. Add ½ inch hot water to pan. Bake uncovered, at 400 degrees for 20 to 25 minutes. Cut centers from eggplant and dice, leaving a shell ½-inch thick. Sprinkle shell with onion salt. Combine eggs, ½ cup water, mashed potato flakes, and 1½ teaspoons onion salt. Add ground beef and diced eggplant; mix lightly. Spoon into eggplant shells. Bake at 400 degrees for 30 minutes. Sprinkle with cheese and bake 10 to 15 minutes longer, until eggplant is tender. Heat tomato sauce; serve over stuffed eggplant. Recipe makes 6 servings.

TACOS ON THE DOUBLE
1 pound ground beef
1 envelope (1¾-oz.) Chili-O Mix
1 cup tomato juice
10 tortillas
Softened butter or margarine
Shredded cabbage
Shredded cheese
Drained pickle relish

Brown ground beef in skillet, stirring to crumble; pour off excess fat. Stir in contents of Chili-O mix envelope and tomato juice; cover and simmer 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Arrange tortillas on greased baking sheet; brush with butter. Bake at 400 degrees for 10 to 15 minutes. (Tortillas should begin to set, but still be flexible.) Remove from pan and fold in half to form shells. Spoon meat mixture into shells; top with cabbage, cheese, and pickle relish. Recipe makes 10 servings.

MEXICAN-AMERICAN SALAD
¼ cup oil
1 tablespoon Worcestershire Sauce
1 tablespoon vinegar
1 tablespoon parsley flakes
1 can (1 lb.) garbanzo or kidney beans, drained
1 can (4 oz.) pimiento, drained and chopped
1 cup chopped celery

Combine oil, Worcestershire sauce, vinegar, and parsley flakes. Combine beans, pimiento, and celery; add dressing and toss lightly. Recipe makes 4 to 6 servings.

UKRANIAN CABBAGE BAKE
2 eggs
1 cup milk
1 cup water
1 envelope (4 servings) potato pancake mix
4 cups shredded cabbage
1 green pepper, chopped
1 cup shredded sharp Cheddar cheese

Combine eggs, milk, water and contents of potato pancake mix envelope. Stir in cabbage and chopped green pepper; spoon into greased shallow 1½-quart casserole. Sprinkle with cheese. Bake at 350 degrees for 35 to 45 minutes, until knife inserted in center comes out clean. Recipe makes 4 to 6 servings.

STUFFED CABBAGE
10 large cabbage leaves
4 slices bacon
1 egg
½ cup water
1 envelope (4 servings) potato pancake mix
4 slices American cheese, diced
1 can (8 oz.) tomato sauce
½ cup water

Cook cabbage in about 1 inch boiling salted water in large covered pan for 5 minutes; drain.

Cook bacon, saving 2 tablespoons drippings; crumble bacon.

Stir together egg, ½ cup water, the 2 tablespoons reserved drippings, and contents of envelope of potato pancake mix. Add cheese and crumbled bacon. Place a spoonful of potato mixture on each cooked cabbage leaf; fold edges over filling then roll up to enclose filling. Fasten with wooden picks. Combine tomato sauce and ½ cup water in large skillet; add cabbage rolls. Cover and Ukranian Cabbage Bake is an old European recipe with a modern twist. Potato pancake mix is used with the shredded cabbage to give a quick, extra heartiness. Round out the menu with a fruit salad, buttered rolls, cake and beverage.

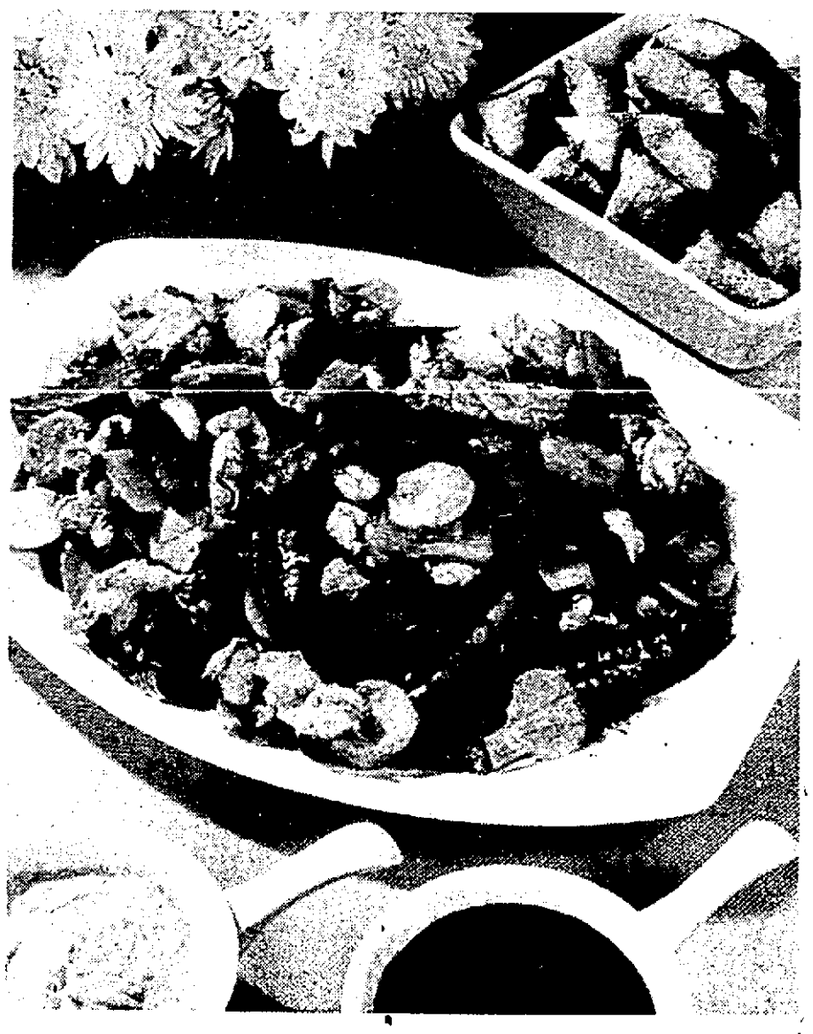
Chinese Chicken and Pea Pods is cooked in traditional stir-fry style, making 1½ pounds of chicken enough to serve four persons. This main dish is a great budget booster.



Cranberry Bean Bake, along with the steamed bread loaf and rum-laced tea, goes back toColonial days in Boston when New England truly was new. The cranberry touch, of course, came from the Indians to make the bean bake, bread and beverage All-American.

Ann Landers

Service will be stopped

Dear Ann Landers: What can parents do about a 27-year-old son who comes home from the service, discovers his wife has fallen in love with another man, refuses to accept the realities of the situation, and decides to do everything and anything to get her back?

What he did first was to call her long-distance on our phone every night for three weeks. (We live in Miami. She went to her mother's in Seattle.) The bill came to over $500

When my husband and I saw it, we almost had a double case of heart failure. His father handed him the bill and said, "We can't afford to pay this." He handed the bill back and replied, "That's too bad. I bet you'll find the money somehow when they tell you they are disconnecting your telephone."

Two days later he left for Seattle. In the meantime, the phone company is writing and calling us and we think it's lousy. After all, we aren't to blame for the crazy behavior of a 27-year-old crybaby. All we did was give him room and board. Any suggestions?—Broke and Burning

Dear B and B.: Sorry, but if the crybaby made the calls on your phone, you are responsible for the bill. Moreover, he is right when he says if you don't pay it the phone company will discontinue the service. (P.S. Who raised that vegetable?

Dear Ann Landers: You reprinted a piece by another writer called, "The Great Automobile Repair Rip-Off." It was an insult to the thousands of ethical, hard-working men and women in the auto-repair industry. Our organization, Independent Garage Owners, is dedicated to consumer protection. Our code of ethics states our pledge to give quality work at fair prices.

Your readers should be informed that the majority of auto-repair shops are out to give top service and make satisfied customers. We can be found in the Yellow Pages under Auto Repairs. Thank you.—Terry Parker, President, I.G.O., Chicago, Ill.

Dear Terry Parker: Ten lashes with an old fuel pipe for Ann Landers. I should not have permitted the clobber to go unchallenged.

Granted, there's plenty of ripping off these days, and the auto-repair people are among the worst offenders, but I know there are many honest people in the business and I should have said so. Thanks for sharpening my points.

Dear Ann Landers: A few weeks ago you published an essay—"Author Unknown"—sent in by a woman who found it between a baby book and an old road map. It was written by a mother of three explaining why she loved each child "the best."

That "unknown author" happens to be Erma Bombeck. She deserves credit for it.—A Reader of hers, Too

Dear Reader: I feel like falling on my sword in the City Room. Not only is Erma a great writer, but she is a good friend of mine.

I thought I'd read every word Erma ever wrote, but I must have been out of the country when that column appeared. Thanks for letting me know. (P.S. Erma, dear, please write and tell me all is forgiven.) (Copyright 1974) cook 45 minutes, until tender. Recipe makes 5 servings.

CHINESE CHICKEN WITH PEA PODS

1½ pounds chicken
1 (6-ounce) pkg. frozen pea pods or ⅓ pound fresh pea pods
1 (8-ounce) can bamboo shoots
1 (8-ounce) can water chestnuts
1 small onion, finely chopped
1 clove garlic, finely chopped
1 small slice fresh ginger, finely chopped or ¼ teaspoon powdered ginger
3 tablespoons Soy Sauce
1 tablespoon sherry
½ teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon salt
Pinch pepper
1 tablespoon cornstarch
2 tablespoons water
4 tablespoons salad oil
Pinch salt

Bone chicken, cut meat into thin strips. Drain bamboo shoots; drain water chestnuts and slice thin. Thaw frozen pea pods and dry on paper towels; wash and drain fresh pea pods; remove ends and strings. Mince together onion, garlic, and fresh ginger.

Combine sauce mixture: Blend together soy sauce, sherry, sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, and pepper. To prepare thickening: Blend cornstarch with 2 tablespoons water.

Place large skillet over high heat until a drop of water disappears almost immediately when flicked onto the pan. Add 3 tablespoons oil and pinch of salt; swirl pan so oil coats surface.

Add minced onion, garlic, and ginger to the pan and cook stirring constantly and vigorously, until golden. Add chicken and cook; continuing to stir, for four minutes, or until light golden brown. Remove everything from the pan to plate; keep warm.

Add remaining tablespoon oil to skillet. Add bamboo shoots and water chestnuts, stirring rapidly for one minute. Add pea pods, stirring constantly; cook for one more minute.

Return cooked chicken to pan; add the sauce mixture. Stir and cook for one minute. Whisk cornstarch mixture with a fork, then add it to pan, cooking and stirring for one minute more, or until the liquid is thickened and clear. Serve immediately.

BAKED BUTTERNUT SQUASH

2 butternut squash, about 1 pound each
3 tablespoons butter
2 cups soft bread crumbs
1 envelope (⅞-ounce) Onion Gravy Mix
½ cup raisins
½ cup water
2 tablespoons brown sugar
Parsley flakes

Preheat oven to 400 degrees F. Cut squash in half lengthwise; remove seeds. Place, cut-side down, in shallow pan; pour about ½-inch boiling water into pan. Bake at 400 degrees for 45 minutes. Cut out centers of squash, leaving a shell about ½-inch thick. Dice squash centers. Melt butter in saucepan, stir in bread crumbs, contents of gravy mix envelope, raisins, water, brown sugar, and diced squash. Spoon into squash shells. Return to ocven and bake 15 to 20 minutes longer, until tender. Garnish with parsley flakes. Recipe makes 4 servings.

CRANBERRY BROWN BREAD

1 cup unsifted all-purpose flour
1 cup yellow corn meal
1 cup whole wheat flour
2 teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
2 cups buttermilk
⅔ cup molasses
⅓ cup sugar
3 cups fresh cranberries

In large bowl, combine all ingredients and stir until well blended. Spoon mixture into a greased and floured 1-quart steamed pudding mold. Cover tightly with a greased lid or foil. Place mold on a rack in a deep kettle. Add enough boiling water to come halfway up the side of the mold. Cover kettle tightly and cook pudding at a slow bubble for 2 hours, adding boiling water if necessary to keep up the level of liquid. Remove mold from kettle. Let stand for 5 minutes, then unmold onto a cake rack. Cool thoroughly and cut into slices. Spread with butter and serve with Cranberry Bean Bake.

CRANBERRY TEA

4 cups cranberry juice cocktail
2 cups strong tea
2 cups ginger ale
Peel of 1 orange
¼ cup sugar
6 whole cloves
1 cup dark rum (optional)

In 3-quart saucepan combine all ingredients, except rum. Simmer at a slow bubble for 5 minutes. Add rum, if desired. Strain into mugs. Serve hot garnished with a cinnamon stick. Recipe makes 2 quarts.

CRANBERRY-BEAN BAKE

1 pound pea beans
Water
1 teaspoon salt
1 large onion chopped
¼ pound salt pork, cut into ½ inch thick slices
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup molasses
¼ cup prepared mustard
¼ cup sugar
2 cups fresh cranberries, chopped

Cover pea beans with water and add salt. Cover and bring to a boil; remove from heat and let stand for 1 hour. Drain beans and add fresh water to cover. Simmer covered until beans are tender, about 1 to 1½ hours, stirring occasional Drain beans, reserving cooking liquid.

Place beans into a 2-quart casserole or bean pot. Stir in remaining ingredients, adding 1 cup of the reserved cooking liquid. Bake covered in a slow oven (250 degrees F.) for 6 to 8 hours or until beans are very tender and all liquid is absorbed. Add more of the reserved bean liquid from time to time to prevent sticking, if necessary. Recipe makes 6 servings.

CHICKEN VERONIQUE

⅔ cup chopped onion
3 tablespoons butter
3 cups chopped, cooked chicken
1 can condensed cream of chicken soup
1 cup dairy sour cream
1½ cups green grapes, halved
1 tablespoon brown sugar
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
¼ teaspoon pepper
Pastry strips

Preheat oven to 450 degrees F. Saute onion in butter until tender. Stir in remaining ingredients. Spoon into 7 x 11-inch pan. Place pastry on top in lattice design. Bake in preheated 450-degree oven 15 minutes or until lightly browned. Recipe makes 6 servings.

CRISS-CROSS PASTRY

1½ cups enriched self-rising flour
¼ cup enriched cornmeal
¼ cup shortening
1 egg
¼ to ⅓ cup milk

Stir together flour and cornmeal. Cut in shortening until mixture resembles small peas. Combine egg and milk. Stir in enough liquid to make a soft dough. Turn onto lightly floured surface and knead gently 30 seconds. Roll out to 9 x 11-inch rectangle. Cut into ½-inch strips.

Spoon self-rising flour into dry measuring cup; level. Do not scoop. If all-purpose flour is used, add 2 teaspoons baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt.

Chicken Veronique is a chicken casserole with a pastry lattice top. In the French manner, the Veronique part of the name simply says that white grapes have been added to the dish. This one is an easy, simple main dish made elegant and delicious.

Female athletes just wouldn't go away

EDITORS NOTE: It will come as no surprise that women athletes at the nation's colleges do not get the same treatment as their male counterparts. But they may soon, because a law called Title IX says universities must provide equal athletic opportunities for both sexes. This is a report on what it was like being a woman athlete before Title IX.

BY FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports writer

The typical athletic director in the typical athletic department is not a woman hater. On his desk, next to all the trophies, is a family portrait showing his wife, and maybe a daughter or two.

Outside his carpeted office, there's another smiling female who pours him coffee, opens his mail and types his letters. He'll say he's all for women.

But, in many cases, his athletic budget won't reflect it.

"I don't understand what goes on in the heads of those athletic directors," says Dan Bakinowski, who gratuitously coached Boston University's women's crew team to two national championships last summer. "They feel the women athletes are going to go away. If they think that, then they're only fooling themselves.

"Women's athletics is not a fad. There are just too many of them out there. They have so much enthusiasm and it isn't going to stop. The ADs had better wise up."

And if the colleges want to continue receiving their federal checks for assistance in various areas, some athletic departments are going to have to change their emphasis; because the long arm of the law is on the way to help women's sports.

Title IX of the 1972 Education Act prohibits discrimination in any university program. That means if men are provided athletic teams, facilities and equipment, women must be provided the same opportunities.

With Title IX about to be fully enforced, opportunities are opening up for women's athletics on many campuses, prompting Anne Findlay Chamberlain, a first-year scholarship recipient at Penn State, to say:

"It used to be that we had to wear skirts and nylons to a game. But that whole era has changed now and we don't have to be embarrassed to be female athletes anymore, even though I never was."

The past is not so encouraging to women. Those days were the dark ages of women sports — an era that still exists on some campuses today — when the men had the whole pie and the women were lucky if they got some crumbs.

The Boston University women's crew team won two national championships this past summer, and they did it without one cent from that school's athletic department, which gave men's crew $35,000 and two full-time coaches last year.

"I think it's ridiculous the way we are treated," says Betsy Hochberg, a member of the team. "They thought we would go away. They just wouldn't take us seriously.

"We practiced at six in the morning so we wouldn't get in the way of the men's team, and also because Dan Bakinowski, our volunteer coach, worked from 9 to 5.

"To compete in meets," Miss Hochberg says, "we had to borrow boats from other schools. We fund-raised with bake sales, raffles and car washes. We even resorted to a rowing marathon. We set up a swimming pool in front of the student union and rowed in two-hour shifts, 24 hours a day for one whole week. People came by and threw change into the pool.

"It was like begging. But the money had to be raised somehow. BU wasn't going to give it to us and we wanted to compete."

With all those problems, the team still managed to qualify for the national championships in Oakland, Calif., causing a new set of problems — transportation and lodging for them and their boats.

They borrowed a boat from Radcliffe and, ironically, ended up beating Radcliffe in the finals. They paid their own way to California, a cost of $1,000 per woman. And they rented the boat trailer owned by the BU men's crew team for five cents a mile, a cost of some $300 for the 6,000-mile round trip.

"If we had been men," says Miss Hochberg, "the athletic department wouldn't have been able to do enough things for us."

Many athletic departments have recognized the existence of women, and, of course, athletics, but not the two together.

At Ohio State, women received $40,000 last year out of a whopping $6 million athletic budget. This year, the women's ante has been raised to $83,000.

At the University of Maryland, which has had a Title IX complaint filed against it by Maryland businessman Carl Croyder, women now receive $30,000 for sports out of a $2.2 million athletic budget.

And at Texas A&M, women have 10 sports and a total budget of $200.

In the Southern Conference, where the constitution formerly said its goals were to provide athletic competition for "male" students, the word "male" was dropped last December.

Most schools have operated women's athletics "on a different philosophy than men's programs," says John E. Shay, vice president of student affairs at the University of Rhode Island.

"Men's sports have full-time coaches, in most major sports, or are freed from regular teaching duties to undertake coaching," Shay says. "Women have coached the women's sports as an overload, in addition to their other duties on campus."

Title IX is designed eventually to create one identical sports philosophy for both sexes, but it won't erase the bad memories.

At Michigan State, "we had to fit our practices around the men's team," says Laura Siebald, a member of the women's swim team. But, as it turns out, that was the least of their problems.

Siebald said the women divers were practicing at odd hours in the men's pool, which was 14 feet deep. But for one home women's meet, the men needed their pool for practice so the meet was held in another pool, only nine feet deep.

Some of the divers came away from that meet with chipped teeth, bruised heads and scratches from colliding with the bottom of the pool, Siebald said.

Gwen Gregory, the HEW official who is presently working on Title IX's final enforcement regulations, tells the following story:

"A women's track team in Illinois had a meet scheduled one year in advance and invited colleges from all around the area. The week before the meet, the men's track coach called up and said he was sorry but the guys wanted some extra practice the day of the meet.

"The meet was cancelled."

Nancy Scannell, a reporter for the Washington Post, said that at Texas A&M, Dennis Fosdick, coach of the women's swimming team, paid $2,200 of his own money to get his team to the national championships, while the men's team was adequately funded by the university for all its travel expenses.

Bakinowski says he stopped getting up at 5:30 a.m. to coach BU crew because "the university didn't do a thing for us. We had twice as many women come out as there were spots in boats, and I got tired of telling somebody: 'You rowed yesterday; let someone else row today.'

"I was on BU crew as an undergraduate, and I know that the men get steak dinners, the whole works, while the women have to beg for traveling expenses.

"The athletic department just has a bunch of distorted values. They just don't see the injustice when men get free rides and women have to go out and sell coffee."

Wine on the table

BY WILLIAM CLIFFORD

Ninety-five years ago 19-year-old Paul Masson arrived in California from his native Burgundy. Six years later he made his first Champagne. By the turn of the century he was winning awards in Paris.

Masson was California's first great Champagne maker. He brought in French grapes, notably Pinot Noir, and French methods, including fermenting in the bottle and long aging on the lees. He was deterimined to make the best Champagne possible in California. Some critics think that his successors still do.

At a recent blind tasting of 16 California Champagnes, Paul Masson Brut was one of four favorites. It has a very full bouquet, excellent balance, and the long agreeable after-taste that's always a sign of good wine making.

Masson himself was particularly fond of a pink Champagne he called Oeil de Perdrix or Partridge Eye. Today's descendant of Oeil de Perdrix is the firm's Pink Champagne. You'll recognize it on the shelf by its stylish metallic label. Extra dry and Rouge or sparkling burgundy are sparklers for semi-sweet palates.

Nobody has recorded whether the actress Anna Held took her famous bath in white or pink Champagne when she was Masson's guest. At all events, he was a generous host who lived in the grand manner, befitting Champagne Society, into his 81st year.

Hide scratches

Nut meats or linseed oil may provide enough coloring to hide a minor scratch on your wood furniture. Break the nut meat of a Brazil nut, black walnut or butternut in half and rub well into the blemish. Linseed oil on a clean cloth may also help.

Think food safety, hunters, cooks told

Whether your hunter is searching for a 4-ounce bobwhite or a 2,000-pound moose, food safety is of vital importance — not only in the field, but also in the home. Bacteria can cause a meat spoilage problem in the field, and a food safety hazard in the kitchen.

Most hunters know that if the quarry is stumbling or staggering, making an abnormal amount of noise, appears partially or completely blind, or is unusually aggressive, it may have rabies or some other disease. Calling a wildlife control officer, at the first opportunity, is the best thing to do.

Don't bag it, warns the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Federal meat and poultry inspectors have a classification of animals they call 4-D (dead, dying, diseased, disabled) and if wild game falls in this category — don't bring it home to the family. The potential risks are enormous.

Once you have the bird (or whatever) firmly in hand, the next step is dressing the game. That is critical, from the safety standpoint.

Clean and chill it as quickly as possible. Warm, freshly killed game is an ideal place for salmonellae and other bacteria responsible for food poisoning and spoilage to grow. Chilling the meat stops their growth cold. If your prize is small, (quail or doves) carry a cooler with you — in the car — and cut the birds with clean utensils and drop them right in the ice chest.

If the weather is below 35 degrees F., there's not much to worry about. There are a number of things to prevent a problem with game meat.

First of all, be sure to wash and sanitize your game bag before taking it to the field and after the hunting trip is over. Carry plastic gloves afield with you and use them when handling the animal, just in case.

When you get the meat home, make sure the meat or fowl is cooked well.

Don't cross-contaminate by using the same platters or utensils for raw and cooked meat without washing between handlings.

Wash hands thoroughly.

Don't leave cooked meat sitting out for long periods at a time. If it's hot — keep it hot; cold, keep it cold. Bacteria grow best between 40 and 140 degrees F. Remember, a one time exposure to 155 degrees F kills common strains of salmonellae.

Meat that is not to be used immediately should be frozen at once.

Traditionally, holiday time is when hunters like to bag ducks and geese, partridges, or venison home from the fields and forests for dinner fare. It's fine — if you're careful, but game taken afield has a greater chance of bacterial contamination than that bought at your local market.

Simple rules such as sanitary conditions, thorough cooking and chilling the meat when obtained are safety rules that make the difference in your holiday. Make plans for food-safe holidays.

Terry Anne to wed Camburn Dec. 15

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Plans by 1973 Miss America Terry Anne Meeuwsen of De Pere, Wis., to be married here Dec. 15 were announced Tuesday by her longtime fiance, Thomas Camburn. The wedding celebration is scheduled at the North Hills Country Club in Menomonee Falls.

Meeuwsen began her climb to national recognition after being crowned Miss Appleton 1972. She then captured the state title before moving on to claim the Miss America crown in Atlantic City, N.J.

Her fiance, a real estate manager in the Milwaukee area, said wedding invitations were mailed out this week.

Meeuwsen, a singer was performing Tuesday in Louisiana and is to return to Milwaukee next month.

Hershey evaluates her job

BY SANDRA GITTENS

NEW YORK (AP) — "I have a phrase I like to use, which is the multipersonal woman. I don't believe that either you or I or any woman out there is just one woman any more," says Lenore Hershey, editor of the Ladies' Home Journal.

Mrs. Hershey says she thoroughly enjoys her new job, but claims she's been living through a year of heavy responsibility since taking it over. Describing herself as a "creative woman by nature, a writer and editor," she says she's had to learn that "if you can't stand the heat, then you'd better get out of the 'office'.

"Meaning, it's taken me a full year to learn how to ride with the daily crises of dealing with people and with pure business management.

"I've been in this business a long time but nobody has ever bothered to train me on the business aspect. I had to learn on the job. It's very difficult."

Training consisted of learning how to deal with men as well as with women who were reporting to her. Patience, forbearance and tact are some of the other things she's had to learn. "But," she says, "I think, first of all, you've got to accept the fact that if you want the job you've got to accept the problems that are involved with it. If you want the big job, it isn't all beer and skittles; it's a lot of great difficulties. And, above all, you have got to learn to trust in your own decisions. It's executive knowhow. It's toughness in its best sense, yet tough without overcompensating. And I think a lot of women are going to have to learn this lesson."

Her learning experiences have been manifest in important areas.

Claiming this to be the most financially successful year the magazine has had in 91 years, Mrs. Hershey also reports an increase in advertising. One of which she is particularly proud is that of an automobile manufacturer. With Detroit often overlooking women in their advertising, she says the Journal went out to open communications with them. As a result, she says, hers is the first women's magazine to get advertising from Detroit.

"One of the reasons we got it was because a group of us went there and talked to them about communicating with women.

"They have traditionally been male-orientated. They felt men were the ones who made decisions on buying cars. So we went out and did a movie with 10 automotive dealers. They said that now up to 20 per cent of their customers are women. We played that in Detroit along with other proof that women are using and buying cars and showed that even when the man is involved in the decision making, women these days are oftentimes playing into that decision. So I think Detroit is finally recognizing our slogan, 'Never underestimate the power of a woman.'

"I feel the slogan is more meaningful today than it ever was," she says.

Sex says more than, 'I love you'

BY JANE TYBRING

Family living specialist, UW-Extension

There's a lot more to sex than physical pleasure. Your sexual behavior says something to your partner. It says lots more than "I love you."

You bring to the marriage bed a whole bag of moods, wishes, needs and fears. Depending on your emotion, some of your messages may be:

"Let's make everything O.K. again."

"Show me I'm not alone."

"Well, who's knuckling under now?"

"Now, don't you think I'm nice?"

Sex says things so powerfully. Psychiatrist Carl Whitaker, University of Wisconsin-Madison, says, "In a strange hidden way, a couple who feels their marriage is cooling off may try to do something to warm it up. The wife, for instance, may casually refer to something that happened at a party.

"The couple casually, subtly, without actually saying so, decides one of them is going to 'help.' It's sort of understood that one of them is going to have an affair."

Whitaker says, "I think of affairs as being amateur psychotherapy efforts. This is a way of trying to bring some heat into the marriage.

"About this time, the partner is allowed to 'discover' that an affair is going on. Then the marriage does get heated up. Sometimes it's successful. Many times it's just plain painful and not successful," he thinks.

Sex makes a great weapon. Because it's so tied to a person's self-esteem, you can use it to influence, manipulate, punish and control your partner.

This happens a lot. It probably happens in every marriage some of the time.

Maybe power struggles have been going on in your marriage. In this book, "Sex Talk," Myron Brenton describes some of these destructive sex games people play.

A popular one is "If you don't, I won't." This is a way of using sex to gain something. A wife who has to beg for money forces her husband to beg for sex. The idea is to deny sex until he gives in to something she wants — like a new car or more help on Saturdays.

Another game is "Hands off; you haven't been good."

This is supposed to be a dandy way to get back at your partner for being mean to you. You feel so righteous. You can't think of a better way to keep your partner in line."

The trouble is you defeat yourself. You withhold sex. Your spouse retaliates by withholding something else. It's a constant struggle, getting bigger and bigger.

Another cruel sex game is "I'm not interested; guess why?" Husbands may play it when they get angry or fed up with their marriages. They keep their wives anxious and guessing what they're doing wrong.

A nasty way to show you're mad happens at a party. You immediately leave your spouse and flirt outrageously with everybody in sight. You make sure your spouse sees. It's a great way to get even for slights, of saying, "Everybody turns me on but you."

Sex is right up there with money and children as a primary battleground in marriage. If you feel hostile and enraged or if you fear rejection, you may behave sexually in some of these destructive ways.

Unfortunately, you probably aren't fully aware of these feelings. You need to be more in touch with what's going on inside you. For a good marriage and good sex, you need to understand why you behave in such hurting ways.

It's hard to respond sexually when you hate your partner, fear him or think you'll be rejected if you don't please.

Learn to talk with your partner about your feelings and about this behavior that hurts. It's the number one way to begin improving your relationship.

Remember, when you share what's going on within you, do it in a way that makes you and your partner feel good. Take both of you into account. Each is an important person.

Ice Breaker slated by hockey group

Appleton Youth Hockey Association is presenting an Ice Breaker from 9 p.m. to midnight Friday at the Appleton Elks Club. Interested persons are invited for an evening of fun, dancing and an opportunity to meet the coaches, referees and other hockey players' parents. Tickets will be available at the door.

Any one wishing further information may call Mrs. Michael Quigley.

Ready-to-eat cereals make instant croutons

Most kitchens have instant croutons on hand for use in soups and salads. They are in the form of unsweetened ready-to-eat cereals, such as puffed wheat, bite-sized shreaded wheat, corn or rice cereals.

They may be toasted with a touch of butter in a 350-degree oven or used plain from the package. These cereals make excellent flavor additions to hot soups or cold salads. The creative cook can experiment with favorite herbs or seasonings such as garlic salt for toasting the cereal a few minutes in the oven. One idea is to add melted butter to the dry cereal, then sprinkle with parsley flakes for a parsley-buttered crouton. This combination goes well with creamed soups.

Lasagne freezes well

Lasagne freezes well either before or after baking. Thaw in the refrigerator. Leftover lasagne also can be stored in the refrigerator for a day or two.

THRIFTY NIFTY By Helen Robertson

A few drips of glycerine excellent to use for lubricating electric mixers, meat choppers, egg beaters.

Award recipient

Sandy Schulze is the first Girl Scout within the Lutheran church to receive the God and Service Award. Making the presentation Sunday during an awards ceremony at Prince of Peace Lutheran Church was the Rev. Vern Holtan, pastor. Schulze gave over 90 hours of service by working in the church nursery, singing in the choir, and doing clerical work in the church office. She has helped with vacation Bible school, and has taught and done babysitting. (Post-Crescent photo)

Sheinwold on bridge

Cunning players know when to duck in 3rd hand

Every experienced bridge player knows enough to play third hand high. It takes cunning rather than experience to break this rule at the right time.

West opened the deuce of hearts, and declarer studied the dummy. This gave East the chance to do some thinking, too.

When declarer, after a few seconds, played the four of hearts from dummy, East innocently played the six of hearts.

South looked at the trick with some suspicion and was tempted to win with the nine of hearts but decided to win with the ace in order to keep a heart entry in dummy for the long diamonds.

West watched South's hesitation with close attention. It wasn't hard to deduce that East had done something peculiar, and it didn't take West long to work out what had happened.

SETS UP DIAMONDS

South proceeded to set up the diamonds according to plan. East took the third diamond and returned the four of clubs. The finesse went to West's king, and back came a club to South's ace.

Now South led the five of hearts, and West shrewdly played the eight. Declarer wavered since he had expected West to put up the king, but he nevertheless played the ten of hearts from dummy.

It was for just this reason that East had withheld the jack of hearts at the first trick. He was able to win the jack of hearts at this moment, and South was down two instead of making the contract with ease.

Mammoth's remains found in Salt Lake City suburb

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — From thousands of years in the past has come the latest visual aid for Salt Lake area school children: the remains of a mammoth, found in an apartment complex.

Children by the hundreds, plus many curious adults, have flocked to the complex in the Salt Lake suburb of Sandy this week to watch scientists recover the bones.

The mammoth is an extinct species of a very large elephant.

Ron Griffin, a resident of the complex who discovered the skeleton last Thursday while digging a drain trench, estimates an average of 1,000 persons have come to the site daily to watch the work.

The discovery of the site literally in someone's own back yard, as opposed to out-of-the-way places where prehistoric excavation work is more commonly done, has proved irresistible to school children.

Some schools have run shuttle buses to the site so the children could watch as scientists probe delicately with dental picks, trowels and other small instruments to uncover the bones. The bones are at about the two-foot level, and digging is going as deep as four feet.

Tom Zeidler of the Utah Historical Society says the bones are estimated at between 11,000 and 20,000 years old, although a more precise dating has not yet been attempted.

The Historical Society has been working jointly on the project with Dr. James H. Madsen Jr. of the University of Utah, where the mammoth's remains will be stored at a museum.

Zeidler says the diggers don't know yet whether they will have enough bones to reconstruct a skeleton. Thirty-five bones have been removed so far. Among the parts still missing are the skull and tusks.

National Guardsmen erected a large tent over the site Thursday to prevent wet weather from damaging the exposed bones or from hindering the search.

The area is thought to have once been swampland around Lake Bonneville, which thousands of years ago was a larger ancestor of the Great Salt Lake. Until the complex of 22 apartment buildings was constructed about two years ago, the site was a pasture.

Hortonville school tax rate drops

HORTONVILLE — The school board Monday set a tax rate of $11.04 per $1,000 of equalized valuation, a drop of nearly $1 per $1,000 from the 1973-74 rate. Last year's rate was $12.

The rate, which will bring in $899,945 in local property taxes, is based on an equalized valuation of $81.5 million, up nearly 12 per cent from last year. The rate decrease comes despite a $22,000 increase in the tax levy.

A drop in student enrollment, coupled with the added valuation, means the district will lose about $100,000 in state education aids, Supt. Marvin Obry told the board. He estimates the aids to total $770,000.

The Town of Greenville remains the largest municipal taxpayer in the district, accounting for 38 per cent of the district's valuation. The Greenville assessments increased $3.7 million, to $31.79 million.

Other district municipalities, their new valuations, increases from 1973-74, and percentage of the total valuation, include: the Village of Hortonville, $15.67 million, up about $1.8 million, for 19.2 per cent of the total; Town of Center, $9.56 million, up $1 million, 11.7 per cent; Town of Dale, $4.07 million, up $200,000, 5 per cent; Town of Ellington, $11.84 million, up $500,000, 14.5 per cent; Town of Grand Chute, $1.75 million, up $200,000, 2.1 per cent; Town of Hortonia, $5.5 million, up about $500,000, 6.77 per cent; and Town of Liberty, $1.3 million, up about $200,000, 1.6 per cent.

Obry said the new assessments do not include manufacturing machinery and equipment, which were dropped from the tax rolls under new state guidelines.

Hortonville board seeks public input on schools

HORTONVILLE — The school board has scheduled a meeting for 8 p.m. Dec. 2 to get citizen input on "long-range considerations."

At its regular meeting Monday, the board instructed Supt. Marvin Obry to plan the meeting, and to invite residents. The University of Wisconsin-Extension will help plan the input session, which will include small group discussions to determine residents' priorities.

Obry said the meeting will be divided into groups of 8-10 persons, who will discuss what they think should be the district's major aim. The small groups will report later to the main session, where a list of top priorities will be determined.

Obry said discussion could include curriculum, future building needs, the effectiveness of parent-teacher conferences, the district's public relations with the community or "anything at all they think is important to the district."

The board has asked residents to preregister for the meeting so plans for the session can be made. Registrations can be made by calling or writing the schools by Nov. 25.

In other business Monday, the board tabled a proposal to write federal representatives expressing the district's view on collective bargaining proposals pending in Congress. The board said Obry should write the letter. It will be discussed at its Nov. 25 meeting.

The board voted to give persons 65 and older free athletic and special events passes to school activities. Those persons should identify themselves at the door or gate.

Faced with a requirement that all school buses must have stop arms by next fall, the board voted to order 25 more arms at $68 each.

Obry also reported on transportation costs, saying 33 buses plus a van transport 2,196 students daily. About 289 students are transported less than two miles, for which the district does not receive state aids. More than 582 students are transported each day to area private schools.

The estimated cost per mile is 57.5 cents, and the per student cost is $76.40 a year. Last year, the per mile and per student costs were 51.9 cents and $71.03, respectively.

The cost figures do not include noon kindergarten transportation, special transportation or activities buses, Obry said.

Courts

Five persons were fined $175 each and ordered to attend group dynamics traffic safety school after they were found guilty Tuesday of driving while intoxicated.

The defendants, their times and places of arrest included:

Gary A. Denow, 19, 208 E. Mary St., Black Creek, early Oct. 27, Ballard and Kroepp roads, Town of Osborn; David M. McCarthy, 19, route 2, Appleton, early Oct. 27, County Trunk JJ and Immel Road, Town of Ellington;

Donald M. Sello, 54, Green Bay, afternoon Oct. 16, State 54 near State 55, Town of Osborn; Arthur F. Smith, 42, Bear Creek, late Oct. 5, Thilky Street near Prospect Street, Bear Creek, and Wesley R. Sachs, 49, 154 Foster Court, Appleton, late Oct. 19, U.S. 41 and County Trunk CC, Town of Vanden Broek. A charge of driving the wrong way on a highway was dismissed in Sachs' case.

The sentences were ordered by Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

Man injured in apparent plunge off parking ramp

An 18-year-old Appleton man is in critical condition at St. Elizabeth Hospital with injuries he sustained in an apparent fall from the Prange's parking ramp onto Midway Street just after midnight today.

According to police and fire department reports, Joseph A. Spreeman, 1613 S. Lawe St., suffered severe face and mouth injuries, a broken leg, multiple internal injuries and external bruises.

Police said they could find no evidence that the man had been struck by a hit-and-run vehicle, leading them to believe Spreeman either jumped, fell or was pushed off the ramp. According to the construction of the ramp, the fall would have been from between the third and sixth levels, or up to nearly 60 feet.

The incident was reported by a citizen who said he had just been to the night deposit of a nearby bank with his mother. He said he was outside his car when he heard a yell.

This, police said, may have been from Spreeman as he fell.

When the two drove down Midway Street a few moments later, they observed Spreeman on the pavement. They then summoned police.

Officers checked all levels of the ramp for evidence, but could find only what appeared to be some fresh vomit on the sixth level. They took samples of this for subsequent testing.

No other persons were found on any levels of the ramp, which had been locked since about 6 p.m.

Spreeman's mother told police her son had failed to return home for supper the previous evening, and that she hadn't seen him since Tuesday morning, when he left for technical school classes.

Hospital authorities said the full extent of his injuries has not been determined.

Bucks lose; worse yet Jabbar out longer

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee Bucks thought they had found just about every way to lose during their early season nightmare, but outdid themselves with a mass of missed opportunities Tuesday night.

The Boston Celtics managed only three baskets, two of them tipins, in 20 first quarter shots. But the Bucks did little to capitalize, shooting only .286 for the period themselves for an 18-7 lead, and eventually dropped their ninth successive National Basketball Association game and 11th in 12 starts, 91-83.

Worse, they learned they are likely to be without Kareem Abdul-Jabbar even longer than expected. The Bucks had hoped to have the 7-foot-2 superstar in the lineup against Cleveland Saturday, but the hand he broke in an Oct. 5 exhibition is still swollen.

"I have no I idea when we'll get him back," Bucks' Coach Larry Costello said. "It could be two more weeks."

The Bucks built a 19 point lead with 4:30 left in the half, but two baskets by Jim Ard and five free throws by Paul Silas, who finished with 22 points, pulled the Celtics to within 43-36 at halftime.

Hank Finkel, who had played only one minute in the first half, fired in eight of his 10 points and grabbed five rebounds in the third quarter as the Celtics surged ahead 6963.

Eight points by George Thompson early in the final period put the Bucks ahead 76-73, but the Celtics took the lead for good at 80-78 on a three point play by John Havlicek with 4:10 left. Two free throws by Don Chaney and a three point play by Silas wrapped it up at 89-81 with 1:57 left.

Celtics' Coach Tom Heinsohn said he "couldn't believe" their early cold spell, but was confident they could catch up because the Bucks hadn't asserted command.

"I never saw anything like that," Heinsohn said. "I thought we'd never score a basket. We must have missed 10 layups. They (the Bucks) should have been up by 40 points after that."

The Celtics' seven points compared with the record low of four scored against the Bucks in a quarter, set by Buffalo Oct. 21, 1972.

"Strange as it seems, we were not playing that badly," Heinsohn said. "The ball just wasn't going in. But we were hustling, scrapping. We came in and had a good laugh at the half. We knew if we put any kind of second half together, we'd win the game."

Despite their horrendous start, the Celtics outshot the Bucks for the game .400 to .375. Jim Price, impressive in his Bucks' debut Sunday, sank only five of 22 shots. Only Bob Dandridge was on his game with 12 of 23 for 24 points.

"We just can't get our offense in gear," Costello said. "I sure don't know what the solution is. We've tried every possibility I can think of. I don't think we could have played better defensively. I can set up defenses to help us win and I think our opponents are well scouted. But I can't put the ball in the hole for us."

"Maybe it's pressure, maybe they're thinking too much," he said. "We've got to loosen up and take our shots. Lots of our shots are from too long a range."

"Maybe we're afraid we can't get inside," he said. "Tonight when we tried to get inside they just switched on us. With Kareem in there, they can't do that."

Heinsohn said the Bucks miss Abdul-Jabbar more than the Celtics miss center Dave Cowens, who broke a foot in the preseason and may resume playing in seven to 10 days.

"We do other things," Heinsohn said. "Cowens is important to us, but he (Abdul-Jabbar) is the hub of their whole ball club. He makes things happen for other people. The best part of his game is passing. People forget that."

The Bucks play tonight at Midwest Division leading Detroit.

"I always had wished the NBA wouldn't play as many as 82 games," Costello said. "But I wish it was 95 this year."

Roberts calls 1974 season 'most-satisfying' at LU

BY ROGER PITT
Post-Crescent staff writer

Lawrence University Coach Ron Roberts calls the 1974 season the most-satisfying in his career.

"Nobody expected us to do much," Roberts said, of his team which posted a 7-2 record and shared second place in the Midwest Conference with a 5-2 mark. "I felt we could be a very good team, but other coaches in the conference didn't take us seriously."

This is the third best record by a Lawrence team under Roberts. The Vikings were unbeaten (8-0) in 1967 and had a 7-1 mark in 1966. Lawrence was 6-3 in 1971.

"This team isn't like those others. There is no one star or two individuals carrying the team. In 1966 and 1967 we had Chuck McKee and Gary Hietpas, both All-American. In 1969, we had Joe Patterson and Lance Alwin. In 1971, Steve Blomberg gained over 1,000 yards rushing.

"This team doesn't have one star, but it does outstanding things. We have a good passer and receivers. Our defense provided the big play when we needed it.

"I feel real fortunate with the record we have and having a chance to work with this group of players. Work was the key to their success. Three things made a difference:

"Defensively, we would bend but wouldn't break. Just like the last play at Cornell. We had other good efforts stopping two-point tries by Carleton and Knox. We did what we had to.

"We had an excellent passer and receivers. This opened up a lot of things for us. Because we were able to pass, our running game was more potent.

"Third, we could kick the ball. Freshman Jeff Reitz gave us a threat anytime we got within the other team's 30-yard line. When we needed a point, he got it."

Another factor was a minimum of mistakes. Mistakes took Lawrence out of two games it could have won.

"Eliminating mistakes is something I learned at Wisconsin," Roberts said. "It doesn't matter what a player does if his mistakes are going to cost you."

Roberts said he knew football was back at Lawrence at the end of last season. The 1973 Vikings came on to win their last three games in logging a 4-4 record.

"I knew we were coming back. The team had come together and had character. This team picked up where that one left off because many of the same people were back.

"The turning point this season was the loss to Grinnell. We made some final adjustments with our people. When we nearly beat Coe, I knew we had arrived.

"Our low point was the loss to Grin-

Woody Hayes gets public reprimand

CHICAGO (AP)—Woody Hayes, Ohio State's controversial Big Ten football coaching dean, has become the fi st victim of the Conference's new Sportsmanlike Conduct Code.

Hayes, for his tirade following his top-ranked Buckeyes' 16-13 upset at Michigan State, Tuesday was publicly reprimanded by Conference Commissioner Wayne Duke and warned a one-game suspension will follow any repetition of his "unsportsmanlike conduct."

Hayes berated game officials and Michigan State tactics after Ohio State failed to beat the clock with a last-second touchdown try which caused the East Lansing, Mich., contest to end in confusion and bedlam.

Duke's ruling was based on a new code approved by the Conference last summer "to curtail the undesirable trends which have earmarked all of intercollegiate athletics."

Hayes, in his 24th Buckeye season, was furious after Ohio State's Brian Baschnagel scooped up a fumbled snap and darted into the end zone only to have the apparent winning touchdown cancelled because time ran out.

Hayes blasted the officials for not calling a timeout when a big pileup was slow untangling after the preceding play. Not only were Michigan State players stalling in getting back on defense, Hayes charged, but they also grabbed and held Ohio State players to prevent their lining up for the crucial last play.

"The officials were remiss," Hayes said. "You never have any explanation from them. They are not to be found any place." The official result was not announced until a lengthy post-game conference between Duke and the officials.

Duke said Hayes had "expressed publicly" his support o the new code directed against "any person who publicly is unduly critical of any game official, Conference personnel, another member institution, or its personnel."

Duke said he would have to study the new code further to determine if it applied only to the current season or future seasons as far as the second offense and a one-game suspension is concerned.

Hayes, whose Buckeyes dropped to fourth place in the AP poll, sends his club against Iowa next Saturday at Iowa City, and then against arch-rival Michigan at Columbus, Ohio, for a Nov. 23 regular season finale.

The outspoken Hayes was short and sassy in his first public comment after being notified by Duke of his censure.

In a telephone report to Iowa coach Bob Commings' weekly press luncheon, Hayes announced: "This is Coach Hayes and I have a statement, we'll be there Saturday." Then he hung up.

Hayes long has worn his feelings on his shirtsleeves, and once before was rebuked by Duke. That was in Duke's first year as commissioner in 1971, when Hayes tore up sideline markers in a wild protest against failure of officials to call pass interference against Michigan.

In 1958, Woody astounded and angered then commissioner Kenneth (Tug) Wilson when he banned a Wilson-led band of Big ten Skywriters from attending a preseason Buckeye practice session.

Roche eyes new target

BY DICK KARBON
Post-Crescent news service

GREEN BAY — Hey, Fran Tarkenton, son of a preacher man, hang onto your helmet . . . Alden Roche is coming to town.

Roche, affectionately known as "Roach" around the practice field, is having one of his best seasons as the Green Bay Packer's right defensive end.

Twice he stuffed Gary Huff into a sack during last Sunday's 20-3 victory over the Chicago Bears. Roche left County Stadium with a smile and a game ball.

Tarkenton will be one of Roche's primary targets during Sunday's game with the Minnesota Vikings, but first he'll have to be get rid of the fellows who run interference.

"The Vikings have a real fine offensive line," Roche willingly concedes. "The guy opposite me, Charles Goodrun, is real strong. He's my main problem.

"I'm not worried about getting to Tarkenton right now, I have to get by the blockers. Once you get past them the rest of the game is supposed to pretty easy."

Roche and the remainder of the Packer defense has shined most times this year. The offense has sputtered, but Roche says he won't let down.

"I suppose sometimes you might get down if the offense isn't going, but you try not to," he said. "You've just got to go back in there and stay aggressive, keep on saying that we'll score and we'll win.

"If we get ahead, then we can really let it go. Get a team behind and you know the only thing they can do is pass to catch up. You just start aiming at the quarterback."

Roche said his personal goal "is to play on a Super Bowl champion. I was pulling for the Vikings to lose Monday night. Things look a little dim this year, but it's still possible.

"We've still got a chance this year, but even if we don't I know we can do it next year . . . very definitely," he said.

PACKER PATTER — Bill Lueck (ankle) and Al Matthews (shoulder) are listed as probable for Sunday's game, while Ted Hendricks (groin) is questionable.

The Vikings' Chuck Foreman is the NFC's leading scorer with 72 points. He's third in rushing with 628 yards and eight touchdowns, and fourth in receiving with 35 catches for 404 yards and four touchdowns.

Tarkenton is third in passing with 57 per cent completions and 1,707 yards. Nate Wright is a co-leader in interceptions with six.

The Pack's Chester Marcol is second in scoring with 60 points. John Brockington is fifth in rushing with 492 yards, but he has a low 2.9 yards per carry average.

Minnesota is second in the conference in offense and sixth in defense. Green Bay is 12th offensively and seventh defensively.

Title game's on WLUK

GREEN BAY — WLUK-TV will present sports coverage of the WISAA football championship Friday at 10:30 p.m.

Bob Schulze, TV-11 Sports Director, will give the play-by-play account of the game with commentary by Chuck Lane.

UW, Wildcats have improved defenses

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — There will be two "happy teams" Saturday when Wisconsin and Northwestern clash but the similarity doesn't end there between the two Big Ten clubs.

Both teams have strengthened their defenses during the season and each has a tailback who has added to his effectiveness by moving back.

After Wisconsin's victory over Iowa, Coach John Jardine called his Badgers "a happy team."

"Make that two happy teams," said Northwestern's John Pont. "We've won two in a row."

"At the start of the season both Wisconsin and Northwestern were considered teams who could move the ball but had poor defenses," said Pont. "I see where Wisconsin has improved defensively. So have we. We're not a great defensive team but we have improved."

The tailbacks who have added to their effectiveness by moving back are Billy Marek of Wisconsin and Jim Pooler of Northwestern.

Marek recently revealed he was able to run better by moving back a step. This enabled him to take the handoff more efficiently and read the seams in the defenses.

"Pooler moved back, too," said Pont. "He moved back from three-and-half feet behind the line of scrimmage to six feet. When Greg Boykin was lost, we shifted Pooler from fullback to tailback. What a difference that has made."

Marek is No. 3 in Big Ten rushing behind Archie Griffin of Ohio State and Courtney Snyder of Indiana. He has a 105.5 rushing average.

Pooler, who is getting better at his new position with every game, is fourth in the conference with a 103.0 average.

With Pooler's effectiveness, Northwestern, strictly a passing team a year ago, is running the ball more.

"This takes the load off Mitch Anderson," said Pont. "He's been erratic this year— up one week, down the next. I just hope this is the week he's up."

Pont doesn't believe anyone can totally stop Marek but he's going to drill his team into cutting his gains to four yards instead of nine.

"Marek lulls the defense to sleep," said Pont. "The pursuit doesn't see a blur like it does when Archie Griffin runs. The outside men see Marek and think they have time to get to him."

"He glides, he slides and he has the ability to hurdle without breaking stride," continued Pont. "The outside people who are the ones who stop the big gains, think they can get to him but when they do he has gained nine yards instead of four."

"When he carried everytime in that 79-yard drive against Iowa last Saturday, Marek didn't run a single sweep. Every rush was from tackle to tackle."

Lourdes' Collins cited

Bob Collins, who turned the Oshkosh Lourdes football program around in just one season, has been named "coach of the year" for the Fox Valley Christian Conference.

Collins, a near-unanimous choice, received seven of eight Valley sportswriters votes, while Premontre's Ron Miller got the other.

Bob Collins

The Knights, who had won just three games in two seasons prior to Collins' arrival this fall, were picked for a sixth-place finish. Instead, Lourdes finished second, with a 7-1 record. The Knights, who are 9-1 overall, meet Marshfield Columbus Friday for the Wisconsin Independent Schools Athletic Association championship.

Collins stresses technique and quickness and instilled a feeling of unity in the Lourdes squad, which doesn't have a great deal of size.

Collins' first head coaching job was at Suring, where he posted a 21-5 record for three seasons. From there, Collins went to Richland College, Dallas, Tex., where he coached baseball for two years.

A 1964 graduate of the University of Wisconsin-LaCrosse, Collins received his masters degree from New Mexico State in '71.

Tradition, 2 lettermen to spur Kimberly

KIMBERLY — The Kimberly High School basketball team will be short on experience but long on tradition as Jack Wippich launches his tenth season as head coach.

The defending Fox Valley Association champs finished with an overall record of 20-2 last season, but Wippich pointed out that he has only about 14 per cent of his scoring punch back.

Two All-FVA selections, Chuck Ruys, a muscular 6-4 center, and Dave Albers, a sharp-shooting 6-2 forward, have graduated. Albers scored 202 points in the league last season, while Ruys contributed 171. The twosome were also adept rebounders. Other top performers lost to graduation were Kim Vanden Boogaard, Bill Reed and Bill Neiderhauser.

"We'll have some problems this year," Wippich said. "Right now, we're trying to get our best five players together. Since we have only two lettermen back, we'll be going with a unit that isn't used to playing together."

Kimberly's returning award winners are Pat Gaffney, a 5-9 senior, and Steve Uelmen, a 5-10 junior. Uelmen was a starter most of last year, while Gaffney started some games.

Other members of Wippich's 11-man varsity squad are Greg Biese (6-4), Randy DeValk (6-0), Joe Frassetto (6-0), Mike Lettau (6-1), Dick Van Grinsven (6-1), Mike Wildenberg (6-0), Joe Wyngaard (6-4), John Miron (6-1) and Tim Peerenboom (6-2). All are seniors except Miron and Peerenboom who are juniors.

Jack Wippich

Regarding Kimberly's basketball tradition, the veteran coach said, "There's no doubt that tradition will mean something. It could help us for a while. But we're hoping to improve as the season goes on. As you know, we're usually a team-oriented club. If we show we can play good team defense and have a distributed scoring attack, we can be in any game."

Looking at the FVA title chase, Wippich said, "You can't go by returning lettermen because coaches use different methods in determining them. So I look at the league games we played last year and what per cent of our scoring is back as compared to other teams. In games against us for example, Oshkosh West has 74 per cent back to our 17, Appleton West has 66 per cent to our eight and Appleton East has 40 per cent returning to our 17."

The Kimberly coach thinks Neenah will be strong again this season but he elaborated on Appleton West.

"Dick Emanuel (the Terrors' coach) is going to be tough. He has (Greg) Reitzner and (Dave) Thiel back. They are experienced starters. He also has (Doug) Schmidt."

Wippich added, "Our strong point is that we have kids who love to compete and get the job done. They are hard workers and good competitors. They're not going to lie down and die."

Kimberly opens with a non-league home game against New London Saturday. Its first FVA encounter is Nov. 30 at Appleton West.

Money peeved at 'Glove' slight

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Don Money of the Milwaukee Brewers said Tuesday he was "mad, shocked and hurt" to learn he had been passed up in favor of Baltimore's Brooks Robinson as Golden Glove award winner among American League third basemen.

"I had the best all around season of my career, and I had the shaft put to me," Money said. "This is not taking anything away from Brooks, but I went out there and set 11 records. He's one of the greatest in the game, but he had an off year. I had a good one."

"If I didn't win it this year, there's a good chance I'll never win it," he said. "The only time I ever will is when Brooks retires."

Money holds 13 American and major league fielding records for third basemen, including fewest errors in a season, five in 1974. He set another mark with 86 consecutive errorless games in one season and 88 in two.

Brewer president Bud Selig called the selection "absolutely disgraceful."

"Brooks Robinson may be the greatest third baseman of all time, but the Golden Glove award is based on 1974 performance, not cumulative 20 year performance," he said.

The Brewers' George Scott won the award for American League first basemen, his sixth such honor.

Courts

Richard Elck, 24, 239 John St., Neenah, was ordered recently to pay $40 per week, including $15 per week toward a $120 arrearage, or face 30 days in jail for contempt of court.

The ruling came after a hearing before Outagamie County Judge R. Thomas Cane.

The couple has one child, 3, who resides with the mother in Appleton. Divorce proceedings took place earlier this year.

Mike Ertl raps 712 honor set

Mike Ertl blasted a 269 opening frame Tuesday and went on to record a 712 national honor count in the Sabre Swords League to highlight Fox Cities' bowling action.

Ertl, who crashed a 730 honor count Oct. 21, rolled a 237 second game and closed with a 213. Ertl graduated from Xavier High School last spring.

nell (Lawrence led 17-0 before losing 25-23).

"It was really a pleasing year, these guys worked awfully hard. Another plus is I had three outstanding assistants who worked as hard as I did.

"Bob Kastner has taken over complete control of the defense. Mike Gallus worked well with Kastner in his first year at the school. Rich Agness did an excellent job with our backs and was tremendous on the phone system during the game. I was fortunate to have a staff like this.

An immediate need will be defensive backs where outstanding seniors Mike De Longe and Rick Flom graduate.

Heading the returnees will be sophomore quarterback Ken Meyer and junior running back Bob Montgomery who had outstanding 1974 seasons. Montgomery, despite nagging injuries, had several 100-yard games and capped the season with a 197-yard effort at Cornell. Meyer directed the conference's most-potent passing attack.

Also back is Reitz who shattered all Lawrence kicking records in his freshman year. He led the team with 53 points, made 29 of 31 PAT tries for a .935 percentage and made eight field goals — all records.

Lawrence set two team records in a 55-14 win over Beloit. The 542 total yards and 339 passing yards were new marks. The Vikes had broken the passing mark earlier against Coe.

Named most valuable by the team were Jeff Reeves, DeLonge and Montgomery. The team spirit award went to Joe Troy. Captains named for the 1975 season were Montgomery and Bill Markwardt. This year's captains were seniors Reeves and De Longe. Markwardt won the 'Mr. Defense' award.

Awards were made at the annual banquet sponsored by the Viking Bench and Appleton Elk's Tuesday at the Elk's Club. Awarded letters were:

Matt Kreiner, Jeff Reitz, Mike DeLonge, Dale Coonrod, Larry Neibor, Brian Bucholz, Dave Hill, Ken Meyer, Earl Patterson, Joe Troy, Jack Anderson, Jeff Chew, Reed Smith, Bob Montgomery, Mark Mancosky.

Tall Pats have high hopes

Until 6-foot-9 Paul Haas suffered torn ankle ligaments, the Appleton East basketball team gave promise of starting one of the tallest units in Fox Cities history.

Even with Haas sidelined (until around Christmas), the Patriots will be able to match size with anyone. Lindsay Klevesahl (6-4 senior) is filling in for Haas and teaming with 6-8 Paul Callaway and 6-3 Bob Marx in the front line. The starting guards in Friday night's non-conference opener against Racine Park (in the Pats' gym) will likely be Phil Plamann (6-1) and Hayden Knight (5-11).

Coach Tom Gossens had hoped to avoid the injury bugaboo that plagued East last season. Callaway, for example, was injured in December and was able to play only about eight complete games on the 19-contest schedule. Callaway and Haas, who replaced the 2-time letterman after he was hurt, both averaged about 10 points a game.

Plamann, a versatile guard who was chosen the team's most valuable player, averaged 10.5 points a game. East, which posted a 4-10 Fox Valley Association record, was 7-12 for all games. Lost, via graduation, were such full-time or part-time starters as Ray Schreiter, Craig Martin, Brad Londre and Jeff West.

Gossens, who has logged a 21-21 record for his first two seasons at East, reports that he's impressed by his squad's good attitude in pre-season practice. He believes his 1974-5 team will display a better offense and a better defense than last season and that it will be stronger in rebounding. Plamann and Knight are hitting the boards hard for guards, Gossens indicates.

The Patriot coach has been impressed by the showing of Knight, an ABC student, who never played basketball until two years ago. Gossens terms Knight "the quickest player I've ever had."

While the Patriots may not be quite as quick, overall, as last season, Gossens feels they'll compensate for it in other ways and likes the manner in which his new unit is working together. The mentor also plans to cut down on his pattern style of play and give his players more of a free rein.

Currently, the top forecourt reserve is Warren Reichelt, 6-5 junior. The leading backcourt reserves are Paul Williamson (5-11 junior), Craig Beaudo (5-9 junior) and Greg Mogenson (5-10 senior).

Other squad members include Kevin Lindberg, 6-2 senior; and juniors "Lefty" Leftwich (5-9), Gary Plamann (5-9), Bryan Nelson (5-10), Dean Ernst (6-1), Tom Shemm (6-0), Dan Bork (6-0) and Tom Ferris (5-10).

The schedule:

Nov. 15 — Racine Park; Nov. 22 — Green Bay Southwest. Nov. 27 — at Kaukauna; Dec. 6 — Neenah; Dec. 13 — at Oshkosh North, Dec. 14 — at New London; Dec. 20 — Kimberly; Jan. 3 — at Appleton West; Jan. 10 — at Menasha; Jan. 17 — Oshkosh West; Jan. 24 — Kaukauna; Jan 31 — at Neenah, Feb. 4 — at Green Bay West; Feb. 7 — Oshkosh North; Feb. 14 — at Kimberly; Feb 21 — Appleton West; Feb 22 — Menasha; Feb. 28 — at Oshkosh West.

AP cites Billy Marek

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Junior Billy Marek, who came into his own with four touchdowns Saturday for Wisconsin after missing two games earlier this season with injuries, was named today as the Associated Press back of the week in college football.

Marek, a 5-foot-8, 186-pound tailback, carried the ball 34 times for 206 yards, 170 of them in the second half, as the Badgers dumped Iowa 28-15.

"Marek ran about as tough as I've ever seen him run," said Wisconsin Coach John Jardine. "When we had to have the first down late in the game there, he just ran like a wildman."

The performance was no fluke for the Chicago St. Rita product. He has rushed for 681 yards and 10 touchdowns this year, despite missing the Purdue and Indiana contests, and is only two short of Badger career touchdown record of 24 established by Rufus Ferguson.

"As far as durability goes, he's the toughest runner I've faced," said Iowa defensive tackle Mike Lopos. "I didn't realy get a helmet on him. He fools you. He's a real competitor."

Marek carried the ball all nine plays on Wisconsin's final 79-yard touchdown drive and was given the game ball for his efforts.

"When they gave me that game ball, it meant a hell of a lot to me," he said. "I've been down a lot this season and giving me the ball picked up my spirits."

Opinion

THE Post-Crescent

Everywhere a GS-12

Sen. Proxmire, who now seems likely to establish a new tenure record among the 25 men Wisconsin has sent to the U.S. Senate since 1848, has developed a keen eye for some of the fiscal absurdities of the bloated national government.

He has demonstrated this eye again in his complaint about the absurd ratio of generously paid civil servants in the federal government establishment, and the profligate pace at which they are being advanced beyond comparable officers and employes in private enterprise.

The senator illustrated with the example of a "GS-12" as a typical middle to upper grade federal civil servant is called in the patois of the bureaucracy. His starting salary is $18,463. But Mr. Proxmire notes the astounding fact, from his vantage point as chairman of a subcommittee on priorities and economy in government, that there are agencies in which as many as half of the white collar workers have that rank, or a higher one.

"In the past I have criticized the ridiculous increase in admirals and generals in the military that is proceeding at a pace that will make every man in the military an admiral or a general within 30 years. Now we find the civil service will have every government employe paid like a bank president within a generation. Is it any wonder why the taxpayer is becoming so overwhelmed?"

Right on, senator, and remind your friend Gov. Lucey that the same strange contrast applies in Madison, as several studies have shown lately.

A bush league play

The men who call the plays for the Little League have figured out how to return the title to American players who have been badly battered by foreign competition in world series play. They won't let those foreigners play.

League officials, of course, are not saying that. They profess concern for the high cost of travel for boys 12 and under from Taiwan or Japan to Williamsport, Pa. Not that the foreign teams ever complained about the cost. Foreign teams, too, they say, play with a nationalistic fervor. Imagine playing to win for your country. We thought the Olympics had a corner on that market.

In any case, league officials expect us to believe that their decision was unaffected by the fact that since foreign teams began competing in the Little League World Series in 1957 the U.S. boys have lost once to a Mexican squad, twice to Japan and the last four years in a row to Taiwan.

It's about time that the title came back to the United States; after all, isn't baseball the all-American sport? And what is more sporting than the Little League? Almost anything.

Campaign law too generous

When the legislature, with the willing collaboration of Gov. Lucey, junked the ineffectual and widely defied election spending law several months ago and wrote an entire new chapter, there was a feeling in some quarters that the newly defined limitations were too generous.

The experience of the candidates in the recent state and local election campaigns appears to have corroborated such reservations.

Most of the major candidates did not approach the gross expenditure limitations set out in law. Many of them, indeed, may have wished that the legislature had been more conservative. Their competitive positions would have been improved. Among them were most of the major Republican nominees for state office.

Pundits everywhere, in the halls of academia as on the editorial desks, express indignant surprise or solemn regret, about the tens of thousands of voters who do not vote. Is it possible that many are "turned off" by the cacophony of repetitious boasting that is the essence of the typical electronic election appeal?

Is it not likely that the voter of taste, judgment and responsible conviction is as often offended as persuaded by the simplistic noise-making that tends to show more often a full purse than a reflective mind?

A sailor who loves U.S.

The release of the Lithuanian sailor Simas Kudirka, was, of all things, an anticlimax. And there was a lot of face-saving all around.

Four years ago seaman Kudirka was a radio operator on the Soviet Ship Sovetskaya patrolling in North Atlantic waters not far from the New England coast. The Russian ship tied up to the United States Coast Guard Cutter Vigilant so that the officers of the two ships could discuss fishing rights, a touchy issue near New England. Kudirka jumped from his ship to the American one and asked for asylum. Instead the Russian officers were permitted to send crewmen on board the Vigilant and drag Kudirka back, giving him a trouncing on the way. Back in Russia, Kudirka was tried for treason and sentenced to ten years in prison.

There was a fuss about the incident in this country. The traditional United States right of asylum had been violated. Not only that, United States officers had concurred in the breach. Two of the Coast Guard officers involved retired from service a bit ahead of time.

Then it turned out that Seaman Kudirka's mother had been born in Brooklyn and had moved to Lithuania before that country was annexed to the Soviet Union. The United States Department of State declared that Kudirka was an American citizen, only no one seemed willing to risk a nuclear war over the matter. The Russians saw it that way, too, and Kudirka was ordered released last summer. He's been joined in New York by his mother, wife and family.

Now that it's all over, maybe we can say the incident wasn't handled so abominably after all. Russian citizens are none the wiser and Americans can feel smugly self-righteous.

But it's not likely Russian ships will be tying up to United States Coast Guard cutters any more.

An appeal to Jews to help Christians

Do you read the London Times? (Neither do I, but someone sent me a copy.) Unless it happens that you do, you probably are not aware of a recent communication from Dr. Andrei Sakharov, the famous Russian dissident physicist. Sakharov's latest act of valor has been to protest, along with three colleagues in the Soviet human rights movement, a recent act of oppression by the Soviet Union.

The appeal tells us that a Georgy Vins will be tried in his home city of Kiev under Article 209-1 of the Ukrainian Criminal Code. This article penalizes the infringement of citizens' rights on the pretext of conducting religious rites.

Apparently Soviet authorities have relied more and more on this particular article because it provides for a longer prison sentence — 10 years plus exile — than other articles commonly applied to believers.

It appears that, in fact, Vins is being charged with "living on the means of believers and, in this way, infringing their material rights." But, the appeal points out, "it is obvious and well known that the church puts no compulsion on believers to contribute money.

"And second," Sakharov continues, "how can the authorities make such charges when, for their devotion to God, believers are fined thousands of rubles, all their religious literature is confiscated and destroyed during hundreds of house searches, musical instruments are destroyed, prayer houses are razed, parents have their children removed from them, and the road to any education beyond secondary school is barred to young believers?"

Now there are several extraordinary things here. Not the persecution of yet another Christian — that is a staple of Communist oppression in the Soviet Union. It is remarkable that Sakharov, himself an atheist, should bestir himself — should honor the freedom of religious conscience even of those who disagree with him. Extraordinary, and noble.

Another remarkable feature of this story is that Sakharov's appeal was addressed to the World Council of Churches two weeks ago, and at this writing, has not, so far as I am aware, been acknowledged.

What is unremarkable about it is that the persecution of Vins, and of his fellow Christians, causes not a ripple in the Christian world. If I were a Christian living in the Soviet Union, I would address my appeals not to Christian authorities outside the Iron Curtain, but to Jewish groups. It is they and only they who have the conscience left to protest.

The Palestinian Liberation Organization probably has tortured and murdered a few hundred people in the past 20 years. In protest against their spokesman being invited to the United Nations, organized Jewish groups mounted the most impressive meeting in recent New York history.

Only a few weeks ago, Sen. Henry M. Jackson's protest against Soviet restrictions on Jewish emigration finally cracked the impasse: And for the first time we can remember, we faced down the Soviet Union, which has promised to swell the quota hugely. I really do not think it has occurred to the Democratic senator from Washington to introduce complementary legislation denying favorable economic treatment to the Soviet Union unless it grants religious liberty to Vins.

He, of course, is only a symbol, as Sakharov's protest shows, citing the systematic and continued persecutions. In 1974 there have been (so far) a dozen trials of Russian Baptists. Indeed, a second appeal of Sakharov concerns the imminent trial of six Lithuanian Catholics.

It, too, is addressed by Sakharov to the World Council of Churches, but also to the 1974 Synod of the Roman Catholic Church, which, until recently, was meeting in Rome.

Both bodies were asked "to speak out in defense of the people who have been arrested for their religious beliefs." Maybe one of these bodies has done so, but not in my presence. Or yours, I warrant.

The World Council of Churches has been too busy denouncing Rhodesia to worry about the Soviet Union. The Catholics are trying to put some order back into their house, and if there is great concern among the bishops for the persecution of Christians in Russia and China, they must have given up that concern for Lent — about 10 years ago, which is the last time I heard, from a pulpit, a denunciation of Communist persecution of the Christians.

I do not expect to hear any such denunciations from Jackson's pulpit. So I say this quite sincerely: This is an appeal to American Jews to put pressure on American Christians to help Russian Christians.

Two men with similar names

MADISON — The wave of Democratic votes that last week elevated two young and ambitious men named La Follette to relatively conspicuous places in the state Capitol poses some intriguing possibilities for the future.

Bronson La Follette as the attorney general-elect is preparing for his installation in an office that will make him a newsmaker of substantial stature even if he does not consciously employ the kind of press agentry that is now regarded as elementary in public places.

Douglas LaFollette will be in the office of secretary of state, where Zimmermans have presided for so many years that the memory of constituents is usually unable to recall any other incumbent.

It is a minor office, by comparison with the command of the state Department of Justice. But precisely because it has so little power or function, the person who holds it is able to concentrate on politics and campaigning and personal publicity without ever running the risk of an accusation that he is neglecting important work.

The attorney general-elect suggested during his campaign that he is not interested in elevation beyond the attorney generalship.

Nobody will pretend that any such suggestion would be binding. More likely it was intended as a kind of acknowledgment that he was sorry later that he left the office after he had won it in a substantial vote some years ago, when he was persuaded to make a vain run for the governorship that led to six years of political exile.

But no such renunciation is likely to come from the other LaFollette. Indeed, had Douglas LaFollette been concerned primarily with public service, he could have performed far more effectively in his state Senate seat — especially with the Democrats winning a majority role this year — than is conceivable in the basically clerical function of the secretary of state's humble household.

But Douglas LaFollette is not especially concerned about the limitations and the mostly routine duties of his new place. He is looking ahead. Having won a statewide office, he can, as a practical matter, exploit it for the next four years in pursuit of a political following that one day may reward him with something better.

He cannot and won't acknowledge such a plan. But everyone knows that if he is seriously concerned with having a part in the politics of his time, his role as a member of the ruling party in the legislature could have had 20 times the impact of his stewardship of a minor clerical division of the state administration.

Thus the circumstance of two young men bearing a magic name is one of the intriguing by-products of a strange political year.

There has been no recent suggestion that the two young men, whose names recall historic chapters in Wisconsin history, have a relationship that is less than correct. But most observers of Capitol affairs doubt that it will ever be truly friendly.

When Secretary of State-designate La-Follette ran for a congressional nomination in southeastern Wisconsin earlier, he claimed a relationship with the celebrated Wisconsin family. Later he amended the assertion sufficiently so that today news reporters routinely call it a "shirttail" connection. It is known that Bronson La Follette resented the incident.

On the day that the attorney general-elect made his formal announcement of candidacy last summer, someone asked him to define whatever distant degree of consanguinity might exist. His reply was terse and had such a tone of finality that it was clear he intended that the subject would never arise again.

For his part, Douglas LaFollette has appeared quite content to drop the matter.

Crime thrives on anonymity

One reason—perhaps a large reason—for the growing rate of crime in the United States is the increased mobility of the population. Between one-fifth and one-fourth of all Americans move every year; and nearly half of our people have been at their present address less than five years.

There is a high correlation between stability of population and crime rates. Generally speaking, the smaller the community, the lower the rate of crime.

When people stay put, you know who they are — and crime thrives on mass anonymity.

You can see this rule operating more clearly in terms of traffic and automobile manners. In a small town or village, motorists, as a rule, behave with caution and courtesy — because everybody knows them and recognizes their cars. It is impossible to get away with bad manners, much less mayhem, in a tight little residential island.

In the big city, or urban complex, motorists go mad with a sense of power, based on a corresponding loss of identity. If you will never see the fellow again, why bother to be civil? He is only part of a mass, not a known neighbor, and you feel no responsibility toward him.

As a corollary, most cities have far more renters than homeowners. If crime statistics were broken down, I'm sure we would find that 95 per cent or more of offenders do not own their own homes. Home ownership alone is a powerful force toward law-abidingness, even in something as trivial as littering.

Examine any block where you have a long row of individual homeowners and an apartment building: Invariably the homes have neat grounds, while the apartment building is the focus of litter and debris. If it's not yours, you don't care about it. Let the landlord worry, if he wants to.

Crime has increased, not because of any "breakdown in morality," but simply as a function of numbers, compression and mobility. The population in the United States has doubled since I was a boy; and has transformed itself from a basically rural to a largely urban nation, with 90 per cent of the people now occupying only 10 per cent of the land.

Our problem is less "moral" than it is economic and sociological. The same people will behave differently in different milieus and under different stimuli. Our crime is a symptom of the way we increasingly live — and you can't deal with the symptom unless you go to the cause. The menacing crime rate in the slum is an attribute of the slum, not of the people who are trapped there.

Appleton Crescent, Nov. 21, 1874.

On Sunday, the Wisconsin Central Railway Co. tore up and removed the rails from its track through Section 36 in this city. That day was chosen probably for fear that some one would start legal proceedings to prevent the accomplishment of their purpose. We doubt whether anyone would care what antics they cut up on their own property. The road was located upon a route not desired by our people, nor were they in any way consulted in its location; the company simply was a trespasser upon a large part of its track.

The company left its $7,000 ravine bridge near the Maple Grove State Road, probably to pay Harriman & Hyde for trespass and damage to Telulah Park!

Lourdes coach will rely on special teams Friday

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The running game and the special teams are likely to decide Friday night's Wisconsin independent high schools' football championship game, in the opinion of the opposing coaches. "We don't plan any big changes, and I would say we'll come out rushing," Marshfield Columbus Coach Walt Kroll said. "We're averaging more than 300 yards a game, and no one has stopped us yet."

"I think a big break situation will decide the game, and it could come on the special teams," Oshkosh Lourdes coach Bob Collins said.

Lourdes (9-1) and Columbus (8-3) will battle at Oshkosh's Titan Stadium at 7:30 p.m. It will be the first championship game appearance for both teams.

Lourdes lost to Green Bay Premontre early in the season, but gained revenge by nipping the Cadets 15-14 in last week's playoff semifinals. Columbus, slowed by several early season injuries, has won its last five games. Four of those have come on the road, including 17-7 over previously unbeaten Milwaukee More in last week's other semifinals.

"We've relied all year on our offensive line to do the job up front and open up holes for our runners, Steve Burr, Joel Weigel, Rick Coleman and Mark Meyers," Kroll said.

"We've got four all-conference (Central Wisconsin Catholic) linemen up front in Brian Fehrenbach and Bobby Dickman, our ends, and Jim Scheuer, a tackle, and Jerry Weinfurtner, a guard," he said. "And we've got experience. All our starting offensive linemen are seniors except Steve Huber, our center, who is a junior."

Burr, voted back of the year in his conference, has rushed for 888 yards, including 96 against More. Meyers came in after Weigel sprained an ankle against More and rushed for 67 yards. Kroll said Weigel should be ready for face Lourdes, but that Meyers will play extensively.

Junior quarterback Dean Dix, who has thrown 13 touchdown passes and is a fine runner, complements Kroll's other backs.

Collins is counting on Lourdes' special teams, particularly the punt return unit ranked first in the Fox Valley Christian Conference.

"The special teams could make the difference because several of the things Columbus does fundamentally well we do, too," he said. "We could neutralize each other in several areas."

"We work hard on our kicking game," he said. "We've had seven punt returns of over 40 yards. We've returned one kickoff for a touchdown and have run six kickoffs past midfield."

Quarterback Jim Runke returned a punt 60 yards for a touchdown against Premontre and runs Lourdes' ground oriented offense led by Mark Spanbauer, second leading rusher in his conference. Spanbauer has rushed for 1,003 yards.

Thiel will pace Hilbert

HILBERT — Olympian Conference scoring leader Rick Thiel returns to pace the current edition of the Hilbert High School basketball team.

Thiel, a 6-1 forward, scored 261 points in conference play last season. The other returning starter off last year's 5-15 club is 6-2 center Steve Kasper. Rob Cummings, the No. 1 reserve a year ago, is out indefinitely with a broken collar bone. Tom Roehrig, a 5-10 guard, and Kirk Koeniger, a 5-11 forward, also lettered last season.

Coach Robert Westphal expects to get help from four sophomores. Mike Cummings, a left hander, is a good ballhandler and will get a starting call Friday when the Wolves entertain Waupun Christian in the season opener.

Dave Schmitting, a 6-1 forward, is also expected to see extended duty. Dan Halbach, a forward, and Gary Hemauer, a guard, have good potential and will see a great deal of playing time according to Westphal.

"We're going to run a lot," the coach said, "so, depth will be important for us."

Ted Hendricks is questionable for Vikings

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Linebacker Ted Hendricks, one of the Green Bay Packers' top defenders, Tuesday was listed as questionable for Sunday's National Football League game at Minnesota.

Hendricks, who has blocked five kicks this year and is tied with teammate Willie Buchanon for third in the National Conference in interceptions with four, pulled a groin muscle against Chicago Sunday and missed most of the second half.

He was replaced by Atlanta castoff Ron Acks, who may start against Minnesota.

"Acks played very well filling in for Hendricks," said Burt Gastuafson, Packer linebacker coach. "He made four tackles, didn't make any mistakes and did the job on every play that he was supposed to do."

Listed as probable were guard Bill Lueck, who has a leg injury, and safety Al Matthews, recovering from a dislocated shoulder.

Ara suspends Best

CHICAGO (AP) — Coach Ara Parseghian of Notre Dame revealed Tuesday that star running back Art Best has been suspended for a week for violation of rules and will miss Saturday's game against Pitt.

"I suspended him for a week," Parseghian told Chicago Football Writers in a telephone interview. "He violated rules and conditions."

Parseghian refused to be specific about the suspension and said it is "better served to keep it within the confines of the team."

Best, because of an earlier injury, has played in only six games for the fifth-ranked Irish and has rushed 43 times for 172 yards.

St. Mary girls cop volleyball title

KAUKAUNA — The St. Mary Catholic School girls' volleyball team, comprised of seventh and eighth graders, recently won the championship of the newly formed Fox Valley Catholic Girls League.

St. Mary won the Northern League title with a 5-0 record, then met St. Margaret Mary, Neenah, Southern League champs, in a playoff. Kaukauna won, 18-16 and 15-3.

Team members

The squad, known as the Rockettes, was composed of Audrey Birschbach, Jane DeLaHunt, Donna Domres, Helen Garcia, Corky Gerrits, Sue Gerhartz, Sue Grissman, Jackie Hoen, Karen Huss, Jenny Kabat, Helen Meverhofer, Lori Mullen, Donna Nagan, Margie Nagan, Mary Onkels, Mary Schroeder, Tracey Schommer, Donna Van DeLoo, Diane Vaneyenhoven, Lynn Walker and Lynn Wirth.

The coaches were Karen Wyngaard and Rose Simon.

I-S to be "short but scrappy"

IOLA—The Iola-Scandinavia basketball team will be "short but scrappy," according to coach Rod Popp.

The Thunderbirds main goal is to improve on last year's overall record of 10-10. Among the four returning lettermen are Dan Remington (5-8), Doug Hines (5-11), Roger Rustad (5-10) and Jeff Olson (5-11). Other players on the squad include Erik Malvik (5-8), Jay Mork (6-0), Brad Hatterman (6-2), Paul Meagher (5-10), Walter Mueller (6-5) and Jeff Hardel (5-10).

Regarding the Central States Conference race Popp said, "The league should be a good one. The conference should have good balance and marked by a lot of close games. Granton and Port Edawards seem to be the pre-season favorites."

I-S Schedule

Nov. 16: Weyauwega (NC); Nov. 19: Plainfield; Nov. 22: Granton; Dec. 6: At Necedah; Dec. 10: Amherst; Dec. 13: Port Edwards; Dec. 20: Rosholt; Jan. 3: At Tigerton; Jan. 7: At Almond; Jan. 20: Gresham; Jan. 17: Tigerton; Jan. 24: At Bowler; Jan. 28: At Amherst; Jan. 31: At Rosholt; Feb. 7: At Gresham; Feb. 11: Marion (NC); Feb. 14: Bowler; Feb. 21: At Wild Rose.

Ed Hanner cited as WSUC player

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Keith Cobb of River Falls and Ed Hanner of Whitewater were named the Wisconsin State University Conference football players of the week Tuesday.

Cobb, a junior halfback from Chicago, gained 122 yards rushing in nine plays and scored 14 points during River Falls' 28-14 victory Saturday over the Stevens Point.

Hanner, a freshman linebacker from Green Bay, was credited with six solo tackles and one assist, an interception and a fumble recovery in Whitewater's 32-19 triumph over Oshkosh.

Chisox sign Bart Johnson

CHICAGO (AP)—Pitcher Bart Johnson, who made an impressive comeback last season, Tuesday became the first Chicago White Sox player to sign a 1975 contract.

Johnson spent most of the first half of the 1974 season in the minors, but then fashioned a 10-4 record after being recalled by the Sox from the Iowa Oaks on July 7.

Johnson's 2.74 earned run average last season led the Sox and was fifth best among American League regular starters.

Johnson, 24, was on the verge of quitting baseball at the end of spring training this year and reported late to the Sox' Iowa farm club at Des Moines, Iowa.

National League's MVP award goes to Garvey

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A failure as a third baseman, Steve Garvey switched to first base in 1973 and has now been named the National League's Most Valuable Player for 1974.

The former Michigan State athlete beat out Lou Brock of the St. Louis Cardinals for the highest honors in the league.

"I hope to improve at first base," Garvey said on learning of the honor. "I'll not be satisified with what I did this year."

What he did this year was to win MVP honors at the All-Star game, lead the Dodgers to the National League pennant and be voted the MVP in his league by baseball writers.

"We have one thing left — the World Series," declared Garvey, whose club lost to Oakland four games to one in this year's title event.

Garvey admitted the honor came as no surprise, figuring he and Brock, the new stolen bases king, would probably be the leading two.

"The biggest honor I received this year was a little baby girl," Garvey told a news conference. "But as far as professional baseball is concerned, this Most Valuable Player award has to be in the category of indivudual achievement all by itself."

Garvey was playing in the World Series at Oakland when his wife, Cyndy, gave birth to their first child, a daughter named Krisha Lee.

Garvey was a write-in-vote starter at first base in the AllStar game. During the season, he hit .312 with 111 runs-battedin and 21 home runs.

Garvey, 27, becomes the seventh Dodger to win the MVP award. He was preceded by Jake Daubert, 1913; Dazzy Vance, 1924; Dolph Camilli, 1941; Jackie Robinson, 1949; Roy Campanella 1951, 1953 and 1955; Don Newcombe, 1956; Maury Wills, 1962, and Sandy Koufax, 1963.

Three Dodgers finished among the first five in the voting and of the 24 first-place votes, 16 went to Los Angeles players — 13 to Garvey, two to Jimmy Wynn and one to Mike Marshall, the relief specialist who won the Cy Young Award as the top pitcher in the league.

Garvey received a total of 270 votes followed by Brock with 233, Marshall, 146, Johnny Bench of Cincinnati, 141, and Wynn with 137. Mike Schmidt of Philadelphia had 131.

Garvey aimed at winning his major league job as a third baseman, but failed when given a chance there for the Dodgers in 1972.

The club still wanted the value of his batting and used him as a pinch hitter early in 1973. Success in that role won him the first-base job despite the fact he stands only 5-feet-10 and is right-handed.

He proved a standout at first during the latter half of 1973 and started there the past season, proving as adept with the glove as with the bat.

Dick Allen having second thoughts about retiring

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Has slugger Dick Allen really retired from baseball to run a stable of race horses? It appears he may be having second thoughts.

Under baseball's rules, he must submit the request to retire to Commissioner of Baseball Bowie Kuhn. The 32-yearold native of Wampum, Pa., has yet to make the formal request.

"Everybody said I'm retired except me," Allen said Monday while appearing at Keystone Race Course to run his horses. One of the mounts he owns finished sixth in a field of seven horses, while the other finished second.

In a tempestuous 14-year career, Allen bounced from the Philadelphia Phillies to the St. Louis Cardinals to the Los Angeles Dodgers until he apparently found a home in Chicago under Manager Chuck Tanner, a close friend also from Wampum.

For three seasons, Tanner apparently had one set of standards for Allen and another for the rest of the White Sox. The team made a run at the defending world champion Oakland Athletics last summer before fading to finish fifth in the American League West.

And in mid-August, six weeks before the end of the season, Allen said he was giving up his dream of playing in a World Series, and was retiring.

"I'm only retired if they don't want me back. I'm going to play somewhere next year— even if it's Jenkintown, Pa." suggested Allen, conceding he has given a thought to playing in Japan.

"I love to play baseball," he said. "I could enjoy playing baseball on the sandlots, as long as we were playing to win."

Asked of his plans next year, Allen replied: "If I play ball in the United States, it'll be in Chicago. It's a great sports town."

Chitwood is Chief coach

SHIOCTON — Taking over double coaching duties his first year at Shiocton, after a dismal 1-17 season was registered by the Chiefs last year, new head Coach Craig Chitwood says "It's sort of like President Ford coming in and taking over from Mr. Nixon."

Chitwood, who will handle varsity and junior varsity coaching, carries a record of 41-21 from previous coaching experiences at Perkins, an Upper Michigan school.

He says the Chiefs should exhibit good speed this season, but adds "If we're not fast, I'd like to see someone faster. But it's hard to tell—I'm coming from a school with 75 kids in a small conference."

Chitwood inherits five players that saw varsity action last year, and all five of the players started at one time or another last year.

Jim Jens, a 5-6 senior, and his brother Jeff Jens, a 5-9 junior, will handle the guard slots, while three 6-0 forwards also have experience. Senior Scott Yahle, senior Harry Winterfeldt and junior Brian Van Stratton will anchor the front line.

Besides the five returning lettermen, Chitwood says Ray and Reuben Banda, a pair of 5-5 junior twins, could be in line for starting jobs.

"The experience is obviously going to help—they're learning to play together pretty well," he says. "But obviously, we're going to have to crawl for everything we get on the boards because we're not too big."

He adds that the Chiefs will try to start some fast breaks, will play a lot of pressure defense, "but mostly, we're just trying to instill a positive attitude more than anything else."

The Chiefs open their 1974 campaign against a tough opponent, when Freedom comes here. Freedom, the defending conference champion, and a state rated team through most of last season, will provide enough competition for Shiocton, but then the Chiefs must face three road games in a row.

Diplomat to again see professor he rescued

OSHKOSH — A University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh (UWO) professor, who was saved from possible execution in Bangladesh in 1971, will be reunited this week with his rescuer.

One of the speakers at the first national Conference on South Asia here Friday and Saturday will be Archer K. Blood, a career diplomat now with the U.S. Army War College.

He was consul general in Dacca, East Pakistan, now Bangladesh, at the time of the massacre of University of Dacca faculty by the West Pakistani military. He will talk on "Nuclear Proliferation and the Indian Example" at the Friday morning session.

Dr. Zillur R. Khan was on leave from the UWO political science department and doing research and teaching at that time at the University of Dacca. He is a native of Bangladesh and his wife is an American.

West Pakistan and East Pakistan were one country, although different in ethnic makeup and economy and separated by portions of India. East Pakistan won its independence and established itself as Bangladesh with Dacca as its capital.

"We had become friends during the 1970-71 period when we were both in Dacca and he spoke to some of my classes at the University of Dacca," Khan said of his acquaintance with Blood.

"But then in March of 1971, things began to get rough. The Bengalis wanted autonomy and could not get it. An impasse had developed and the military decided to put down the movement by force on the evening of March 25. It was a cold-blooded, organized program of massacre.

"That next morning Archer Blood in his car with the American flags flying and I in another car toured the university area where I showed him the bodies of my colleagues who had been killed.

"On March 31 the Pakistani military wanted to get some of those not involved militarily but who were intellectually involved," Khan continued. "I had been doing research on the move for autonomy and had written several articles.

"About 1 a.m. on April 1 they came to my house, scaled the outer wall like commandos and knocked on the door several times. My wife and I and our young son, Tamiz, who was 2 at the time, locked ourselves into an upstairs bathroom.

"The pounding on the downstairs door continued. I finally called out to [illegible] their native Pakistani language to what they wanted and my wife shouted, 'We are Americans!'

"I called to them that I wanted to talk to their officer in charge and wanted him there before we came down. My wife insisted on going down with me.

"When they saw that she was an American they apologized and said they did not know her husband was a Pakistani. They thought the occupants were Bengalis."

Blood came later that morning with some members of his staff and warned the Khans to get out and that Mrs. Khan, being an American, should list her husband as her dependent, the UWO professor said.

"On April 5 I got word to leave by plane the next day," Khan said. "We were taken to the plane and got on. While waiting to take off, an announcement came over the speaker that there were electrical storms in the area and the plane would not be leaving for a while. I wondered if this was another ploy which might prevent my leaving.

"We had to get off and wait in the terminal. Archer Blood sat on one side of me and his economic officer on the other. A Pakistani soldier with a machine gun came and stood in front of me," Khan continued.

"I thought this was it. They were going to take me away. Blood and the economic officer stood up as if to protect me. The soldier spoke to me in the Pakistani language and I replied. He then put his hand into his pocket and gave me a letter which he wanted me to mail to his family from Karachi when we landed.

"A storm did develop and after it subsided, we got back on the plane and left. My wife and son had American passports while mine was a Pakistan passport. I had not completed the residency requirement for U.S. citizenship at the time," Khan explained.

The UWO professor said he could not speak highly enough of the American consul general in Dacca and his stand on behalf of the Bengalis and the suppressed people of Pakistan.

. . .guess it hadta happen. Anybody what keeps buildin' more 'n bigger ever' year is bound t' run outa energy sooner 'r later.

Ain't 'she' sweet?

More buyer protection likely in new Congress

BY ARTHUR E. ROUSE

WASHINGTON — Prospects for passage of major consumer legislation in Congress were increased considerably by the mid-term elections.

Among the more important measures now likely to be approved are national health insurance, an overall consumer agency in Washington, no-fault automobile insurance, strong economic controls and tax reform.

The American Medical Association, the principal opponent of mandatory health insurance, already has softened its stand because so many of its supporters were defeated for re-election.

At the same time, the committee for national health insurance has declared that the new Congress "offers the best opportunity yet for a decent national health security program." So this battle has begun even before all the official results of the election are in.

Chances for a new federal consumer agency and a national system of no-fault auto insurance also have improved substantially. The agency idea was shelved in the Senate in September by only two votes when a move to shut off a filibuster against the bill failed by only that margin to attain the required two-thirds vote.

A hard core of Republicans and Southern Democrats who conducted the filibuster against the measure has been reduced by at least four and possibly as much as six votes because of the elections. Senators in this group who will not be back next year include:

Edward Gurney, R-Fla.; Peter Dominick, R-Colo.; Sam Ervin, D-N.C., who helped lead the filibuster; J. William Fulbright, D-Ark.; Wallace Bennett, R-Utah; and Milton Young, R-N.D.

Successors to Gurney, Dominick, Ervin and Fulbright appear to be somewhat less conservative, although replacements for Bennett and Young (if his defeat is confirmed by the official canvass) may not vote any differently on consumer matters.

Other senators who voted often against consumer legislation but who won't be back are George Aiken, R-Vt.; Marlow Cook, R-Ky.; Norris Cotton, R-N.H.; and Alan Bible, D-Nev. Successors to Cook and Aiken are less conservative on economic matters.

Also enhancing the legislative outlook for consumer bills is the new alignment of committee chairman. These include William Proxmire, D-Wis., who will succeed John Sparkman, D-Ala., as head of the banking committee, and Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., who will chair government operations, replacing Ervin.

In the House of Representatives, an increased liberal tinge also will be apparent next January because of the influx of so many new Democrats and liberal Republicans. But committee chairmanships will continue to be dominated by conservative Southern Democrats.

Leaders of both houses already have started talking about a "mandate" from the people for stronger economic measures to curb inflation. They obviously feel a new responsibility to act, especially if President Ford chooses not to offer anything stronger than he has proposed.

Adding to the feeling of a mandate is the high visibility of economic matters in campaign debate. Not for a long time has any election been so dominated by discussion over prices, environment and other consumer matters.

Police & fire

KAUKAUNA — Park Supt. Victor Luedtke reported to police that an outside drinking fountain had been stolen over the weekend from the swimming pool area. The cost of replacement is estimated at $100. The fountain had been disconnected for the winter.

LITTLE CHUTE — Mary Arnoldussen, 418 W. Second St., Kimberly, reported to police that a leather purse containing a siall amount of money, driver's license, identification cards and a pair of eyeglasses valued at $60 had been stolen from her unlocked car Monday while it was parked in the Miami Circle trailer park.

Kaukauna schools to spend $4.6 million

KAUKAUNA — The board of education Tuesday approved a 1975 budget calling for expenditures of $4,679,656, of which $2,763,639 is to be raised through tax levy.

This compares to a 1974 budget of $4,164,367, of which $2,821,101 was raised through tax levy. Prior to final adoption, the budget will be studied by the fiscal control board at 7 p.m., Nov. 21 in the city hall council chambers.

Citing the drop in tax levy, Business Manager Thomas Nytes said that due to changes in state laws, the city of Kankauna's share has been reduced by $617,000 during the last two years which represents about a $6 per $1,000 assessed valuation drop in the tax rate.

Overall, the budget calls for a 12.37 per cent increase in expenditures, but a 58 per cent increase in state aids enabled the district tax levy to decline, Nytes said. He also said that due to the machinery and equipment tax exemption which changes the assessed value of municipalities, Kaukauna would be responsible for 60 per cent of the budget in 1975, compared with 68 per cent in 1974.

Administrative costs in the budget amount to $71,185, compared with $66,248 last year, and accounts for 1.7 per cent of the total budget. Instructional costs jumped from $2,361,069 to $2,706,002 and represents 66.5 per cent of the total budget, compared with 66 per cent last year.

Attendance costs increased from $5,729 to $6,546; health services declined from $16,405 to $10,820 and pupil transportation costs increased from $181,103 to $189,670. The latter represents 4.7 per cent of the total budget. Operational costs which account for 7.2 per cent of the budget show an increase from $271,297 to $294,120.

Maintenance costs jumped from $81,130 to $103,778 and accounts for 2.6 per cent of the budget. Fixed charges, which accounts for 14.6 per cent of the budget were increased from $503,346 to $593,293. Debt service increased from $592,060 to $597,610 and is separate from operational costs.

Student activities was increased $1,000 to $5,300 and capital outlays were increased from $81,677 to $101,332.

An increase of state aids from $1,128,221 to $1,697,885 is anticipated for 1975. Other miscellaneous receipts including textbook rentals, utility taxes, rental of school buildings, state handicapped aid, state transportation aid, federal aids and other revenues remained about the same as last year in most cases.

Tax levy for Kaukauna for last year was $1,923,708 compared with an anticipated $1,657,257 in 1975, a decrease of $266,450. The levy for the Town of Harrison shows a $40,197 increase to $254,883 and the Town of Buchanan is up $19,738 to $182,234.

Residents of the Town of VandenBroek will pay an additional $22,648 to $201,224; Town of Woodville increases $20,011 to $98,720; Town of Holland increases $20,961 to $105,030; Town of Kaukauna increases $13,057 to $69,761; a portion of the Village of Little Chute increases $67,843 to $158,118 and the Village of Sherwood increases $4,530 to $36,406.

Nixon experiences big jump in blood pressure

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon is experiencing dramatic blood pressure increases, but his doctor says he expects him to be released from the hospital late this week.

The blood pressure jump to an abnormally high of 180 over 95 was noticed Monday when Nixon, 61, was talking with a visitor. Dr. John C. Lungren, Nixon's personal doctor, said the former president's blood pressure is normally about 120 over 70 or 80.

Nixon's only physical activity is believed to be walks in his top-floor room at Memorial Hospital Medical Center, where he is recuperating from surgery to remove a blood clot from his left leg and subsequent post operative shock. He also has a slight case of pneumonia.

Police & fire beat

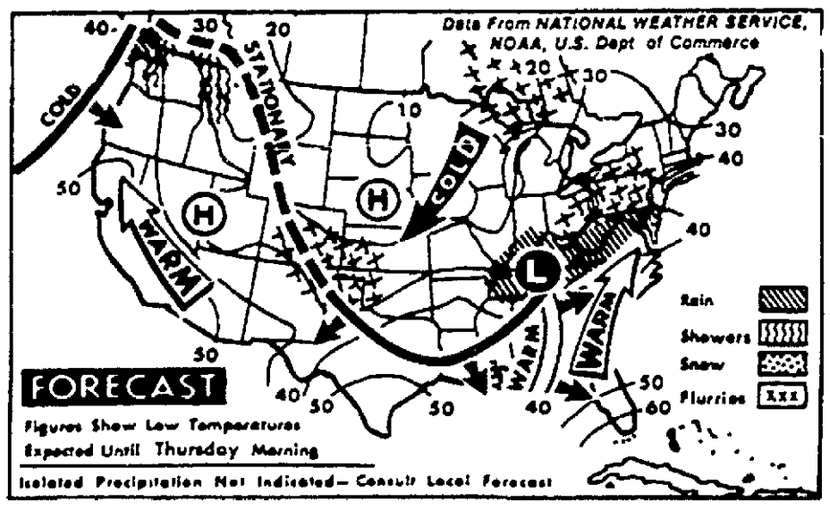
Mrs Mary E Lindauer, 721½ W Third St, told police her purse was stolen by two youths at Harris and Locust streets about 2:50 p.m. Tuesday. She had been walking near the intersection, she said, when the boys approached, took the purse and fled.

Police said she had $24 in the purse.

Three persons were treated at Kaukauna Community Hospital for injuries received in a Saturday afternoon accident on Bain Road near Section Line Road, Town of Oneida. The accident was not reported to police until Tuesday.

One driver, Richard W. Vande Hey, 24, route 1, Kaukauna, sustained a cut lip and bruised knee, while a passenger, Eugene Cornelius, 29, route 1, De Pere, received facial cuts. Vande Hey's brother Allen, 22, who was driving the other vehicle, sustained back injuries.

Richard Vande Hey told police he was driving his car east on Bain Road when he struck the rear of his brother's tractor. Richard claimed the tractor did not have adequate taillights or a slow moving vehicle emblem.



Weather forecast

Snow flurries are forecast for parts of the Great Lakes area, the southern Great Plains and Ohio and Pennsylvania, according to the National Weather Service. Showers are predicted for the Pacific Northwest and rain is expected in a band from Tennessee to Delaware. (AP wirephoto map)

Hello, Ol' Man Winter

Ol' Man Winter left a trace of snow in the Fox Cities and will continue to make it chilly for the Valley.

Cloudy and cold tonight and Thursday with a chance of snow flurries is the forecast from the U.S. Weather Service in Green Bay. The low tonight will be in the low to mid 20s and the high on Thursday in the low to mid 30s. Winds will be from the west-northwest at 8-15 miles per hour, with the chance of measurable precipitation during the period at 20 per cent.

The outlook for Friday includes a low in the upper teens, a high near 30 and a chance of snow flurries.

Wisconsin Michigan Power Co. reported that during the last 24 hours, Appleton had a high temperature of 39 and a low of 25. Overnight lows elsewhere in the state stayed below the freezing mark. Moisture from Lake Superior left about three inches of snow on the ground in extreme northern Wisconsin, while flurries dusted other areas.

Readings at the power company this morning included the barometer at 29.78 and steady, winds from the west-northwest at 8 m.p.h., relative humidity at 100 per cent and cloudy skies.

Sunset today at 4:29 p.m. Sunrise tomorrow at 6:47 a.m. New Moon tonight at 6:53 p.m.

Prominent stars: Square of Pegasus high overhead at 7:57 p.m. Rigel rises at 8:16 p.m.

Courts

John A. Lewicki, 30, 3121 N. Lawe St., has been ordered to pay $20 per week until a $640 arrearage is paid or face 30 days in Outagamie County Judge R. Thomas Cane issued the order after a recent non-support hearing.

Lewicki and his wife had been in the process of getting a divorce, but those proceedings were dismissed on mutual consent. The couple has two children, ages 4 and 2.

Three persons forfeited $109 each Tuesday for recent traffic violations. The forfeitures were approved by Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

The defendants and their charges included:

Barbara G. Chesna, 30, 1409 N. Bennett St., Appleton, speeding 30 m.p.h. over the posted limit at County Trunks CE and K, Town of Buchanan, early Oct. 15; Philip D. Martzahl, 22, route 3, Appleton, speeding 34 m.p.h. over the posted limit on State 47 near Eisner Road, Town of Grand Chute, early Oct. 23, and David M. Why buy extra liquid?

Test shown compares Freshlike French style green beans with another leading brand. When other vegetables are compared liquid levels will vary, but Freshlike always contains less liquid.

Buy Freshlike and get less liquid, "Tender Crisp" flavor and still about the same amount of servings as taller cans.

We cook Freshlike vegetables in less liquid than vegetables in taller cans. Why? Because we think that's the very best way to give them the "Tender Crisp" flavor you'll love! So why buy extra liquid? Buy Freshlike . . . the most like fresh.

SAVE 7¢ on any 2 cans of Freshlike vegetables

Many happenings in '74 were favorable

Hasn't anything gone right on the economic front in 1974? Sure, many things of great importance have gone right—but they primarily fall into the category of tragic events that might have happened but have not. To illustrate:

* The major oil-consuming nations have not turned inward and become bitter competitors for any oil the producers agree to supply. On the contrary, 10 countries that import 80 per cent of the world's oil have formed a cartel of our own to "secure oil supplies on reasonable and equitable terms." The 10 which have united into an International Energy Agency include the U.S., Japan and leading nations of Europe (with the exception of Norway and France). We have pledged to create huge oil stockpiles and to share both total production and imports should we be slapped with another oil embargo. This very recognition that we are now all parts of a world economy and that the trading nations will go up or down together is in itself exhilarating good news of potentially enormous meaning.

Banking system holds up

* The international banking system has not broken down, despite failures of Herstatt in Germany, lesser institutions in Italy, Britain and elsewhere, and the bankruptcy of the giant Franklin National in the U.S. The Central Bankers actually have publicly stated they will assist banks that get into trouble and thus threaten to set off a domino-like series of failures. Depositors in insured institutions in the U.S. have not lost a penny. Public confidence remains high.

* Even the weakest among our European allies have not collapsed. Italy has indeed been rescued again; Britain—through some genius of her own—is still muddling through, the Common Market is very much alive and indulging in its usual cranky squabbling.

* A predicted mass flight from the U.S. dollar into "things" has not occurred—even though for months our economic policies were non-policies. U.S. consumers have instead raised their rate of savings to almost 8 cents out of every dollar of disposable income, in face of the fact that real incomes are down from a year ago. While, of course, this reflects a deep sense of insecurity, it also indicates a continued faith in the U.S. dollar as a medium of value.

Shortages have been easing

* The dire forecasts of fundamental and prolonged scarcities of vital products and raw materials have not held up. Shortages have been easing in areas ranging from nails to newsprint, from copper to cotton, from utility poles to electric wire and cable. Shortages are expected to ease for many more products in 1975, including such essentials as fertilizer and chemical fibres. Areas where supplies are expected to remain tight for a long time are shrinking.

* We have not been hit by a devastating credit crunch. Credit has been excruciatingly tight, with mortgage money all but unavailable in some regions. Loans have been horribly expensive, with even top-rated borrowers paying 12 to 15 per cent for loans and the U.S. government itself forced to pay above 9 per cent for short-term money. But the eerie credit squeezes of 1966 and 1970—when money just seemed to disappear—have not been repeated. Federal Reserve Board chairman Burns promised to keep credit flowing—and it has.

* The U.S. has not been compelled to retreat in foreign trade. In fact, when the distortions caused by our expensive oil imports and huge agricultural exports are eliminated, we show impressive competitive gains in trade with our major commercial rivals and trading partners. We have been achieving much bigger surpluses in our trade with the Common Market this year than last. The red ink in our balance of payments resulting from oil imports is far different from the destructive deficits resulting in the early 1970s from the fact that our dollar was dreadfully overvalued. The U.S. dollar today is more fairly priced than in many years— neither dangerously overvalued nor undervalued—and it has more than held its own as an international medium of exchange during a period when all currency rates have been "floating" in value against each other. Floating also has not become a synonym for "drowning" and the world is accepting an evolution of our monetary system.

* Finally, the world has not been struck by the catastrophic depression (of the 1929-32 variety) feared by 51 per cent of Americans recently polled by Gallup.

Rather, the probability is growing that inflation will moderate from now on and the recession will end in 1975. The debate centers not on whether or when the downturn will end but, rather, on whether it will end next year in a V-shape or a saucer-shape—a sharp down and brisk up or a slow down, a bumping along bottom and a sluggish swing up. But depression? No.

Today in history

By the Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, Nov. 13, the 317th day of 1974. There are 48 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1956, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that segregation of the races on public buses was unconstitutional.

On this date:

In 1794, President George Washington sent an army into Pennsylvania to suppress an uprising by frontiersmen, known as the Whiskey Rebellion.

In 1834, California adopted a state constituiton.

In 1918, the Republic of Austria was proclaimed.

In 1941, in World War II, the British aircraft carrier, "Ark Royal," was torpedoed and sunk in the Mediterranean, and only 18 of the crew survived.

In 1942, the Pacific War naval Battle of Guadalcanal began. It ended in defeat for Japan.

In 1970, West Germany and Poland agreed on a treaty fixing the Oder-Neisse line as a border.

Ten years ago: Communist China's Premier Chou En-Lai left Moscow amid signs of a great deal of coolness after six days of talks with Soviet leaders.

Five years ago: The FBI arrested three men and a woman in New York and charged them with eight bombings in the city since July.

Israel fears it's being deserted by Americans

WASHINGTON—The huge, emotional pro-Israel domonstration in New York's United Nations Plaza last week took place only because of the strong but covert approval of the Israel government, signalling a significant policy change in Israel reflecting its new sense of isolation.

According to one leader of the influential American-Jewish community, sponsors of the rally (which was aimed at the Palestine Liberation Organization) "got their signals plain and clear from Jerusalem." Although the Israeli government could have stopped the demonstration with one word, it encouraged the American Jewish leaders. Moreover, Moshe Dayan and Abba Eban, Israel's two most famous politicians, would never have addressed the rally without permission from Rabin's government.

Israel fears it's being deserted

The reason: Israel now feels greater isolation than at any time since its founding 25 years ago. Worse, it fears President Ford and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger may be moving toward recognizing the existence of the PLO—along with almost every other country in the world. The rally showed the Ford administration Israel's huge reservoir of militant Americans eager to plead Israel's case.

Prime Minister Itzhak Rabin's government feels beleaguered in the wake of the UN invitation to the PLO to present its case for an independent Palestinian state.

In February 1970, when the militant Jewish Defense League (JDL) and other Pro-Israeli partisans demonstrated in Chicago against the late President Georges Pompidou of France in protest against his pro-Arab stance, the Israeli government and leading American Jewish organizations were furious. Israel's policy then was to keep a low profile in the U.S. on grounds that noisy pro-Israeli rallies might boomerang.

A footnote: U.S. security agencies are genuinely frightened about keeping peace when PLO leaders arrive in New York for the UN debate. Anti-Arab hostility inside New York's large Jewish community is now at a peak.

The impatient Mr. Brezhnev

When Secretary of State Henry Kissinger entered the Kremlin Oct. 24 to begin strategic arms conversations, he was taken aback as Soviet party boss Leonid Brezhnev immediately took him to task for failing to deliver on long-promised trade concessions.

Kissinger was ready to begin serious explorations of the arms question. But Brezhnev opened by complaining at length that the Soviet Union had now agreed to U.S. demands for freer emigration of Russian Jews in return for most-favored-nation trading status. Even so, Congress had not acted and showed no signs of acting. What was wrong?

Actually the Soviet Union had backed down on the emigration question only six days earlier. Brezhnev also was well aware that Congress was in recess until after the American elections. Still, Brezhnev was making clear his irritation with Kissinger's inability to deliver the goods.

Arab leaders also irritated

Arab leaders, particularly Egyptians, are showing the same irritation over refusal by Congress to approve the aid package pledged by Kissinger as an integral part of a Mideast peace settlement. In the new heavily Democratic and potentially neo-isolationist Congress, Kissinger's ability to deliver on promises may decline rather than improve.

Lassitude at the White House in recruiting a new cabinet will probably deprive President Ford of the valuable services of former Gov. Linwood Holton of Virginia.

Since leaving Richmond last January at the end of his term as governor, Holton has been filling a post obviously below his capabilities: Assistant Secretary of State for congressional affairs. Mr. Ford's transition chief, former Gov. William Scranton of Pennsylvania, listed Holton as a potential cabinet appointment. What's more, it has been made clear that Holton may accept a lucrative private appointment unless he is named to the cabinet.

Nevertheless, the White House has made no contact whatever with Holton, who is therefore likely to enter law practice in Washington soon. Nor have other Republican progressives, including Elliot Richardson and William Ruckelshaus, been contacted.

Top Ford aides fear a new cabinet dominated by such moderates would enrage Gov. Ronald Reagan of California and stimulate a third-party movement. That is a principal reason why there is no cabinet shakeup in immediate view.

In addition, conservative political aides at the White House are deeply influenced by right-wing Virginia Republicans, blood enemies of Holton. In truth, private polls taken for other politicians last year showed Holton to be the state's most popular political figure even after four years as governor.

A footnote: Mr. Ford will be urged by key advisers not to follow his inclination to name to his cabinet old congressional comrades defeated last Tuesday—especially Rep. Wiley Mayne of Iowa as Secretary of Agriculture.

Joint chiefs double numbers, circumvent Congress, Aspin says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., said Tuesday the Pentagon has thwarted the will of Congress by forming a new organizational group effectively doubling the number of officers assigned to the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Aspin said that although Congress by law has set a ceiling of 400 officers under Joint Chiefs, the manpower shuffling means that "actually 801 are working there."

The Wisconsin Democrat said this has resulted from the setting up of a new group of officers called the Organization of the Joint Chiefs of Staff— OJCS— which is not mentioned in the law.

"This second staff, the members of which work intermingled with the Joint Staff, allows the ceiling to be exceeded by 100 per cent," Aspin said.

A Pentagon spokesman said that as of Oct. 30, the staff of the Joint Chiefs was composed of 395 officers and that another 363 officers were assigned to OJCS, for a total of 758.

"While Congress did not direct the establishment of OJCS, its existence is well known to the Congress and is within the executive authority of the President as commander-in-chief and the secretary of defense," the spokesman said.

He said, "OJCS includes such functions as administrative, analytical and command control support."

The congressman, a frequent Pentagon critic, said it was thought that limiting the number of officers on the Joint Chiefs of Staff would assure continued civilian control of the military.

The Joint Chiefs are the principal military advisers to the President and defense secretary.

Italian film director Vittorio de Sica dies

ROME (AP) — Vittorio de Sica, whose "Bicycle Thief" and other powerfully realistic films on the struggles of the poor helped usher in a new era in movie history, has died in Paris, it was announced today.

He was 72 and had never fully recovered since he underwent surgery for removal of a cyst in his lungs in August 1973. He had resumed work but walked with the aid of a cane.

It was understood De Sica was in Paris for the premiere of his 30th film, "The Journey," and that Sophia Loren, the actress he admired most, was one of his last visitors.

De Sica was one of the leaders of the group of postwar Italian film makers who revolutionized the industry. Four of his movies won Oscars.

The announcement of De Sica's death was made by Carlo Ponti, who produced "The Journey." Miss Loren is his wife.

"It is very hard to put into words what Vittorio meant to Sophia and me," Ponti said. "We worked together for 20 years. He was a great artist, a great man and above all a friend who cannot be replaced."

De Sica, who won acclaim abroad as a director, was no less popular in Italy as an actor. De Sica made his acting debut in 1923. He played some 200 roles, mainly in light comedy films.

A native of Sora, a mountain village near Rome, De Sica rose from poverty to international fame.

"Shoeshine" and "The Bicycle Thief" were De Sica's first international successes. His later films included "Miracle in Milan," "Umberto D," "Bocaccio 70," "Two Women" and "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow."

"Shoeshine," "The Bicycle Thief," "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow" and "The Garden of the Finzi-Continis" all won Oscars for best foreign films.

Youth dies in hazing stunt

LONG BRANCH, N.J. (AP) — Seven Monmouth College students have been charged with manslaughter in a fraternity initiation death.

William Edward Flowers, 19, of Neptune, N.J., died while performing a stunt as a pledge to the Zeta Beta Tau social fraternity. He was the fraternity's first black pledge.

Authorities said Flowers suffocated when a mock grave he dug in wet sand collapsed on him early Tuesday.

They said that when the sand caved in on him, other ZBT pledges and brothers were unable to free him and called authorities. Flowers was removed from the hole by the local first aid squad and fire department.

Police said Flowers was the first of five pledges to dig a sand hole and lie in it and went unnoticed briefly as the others carried out their part of the rite.

The fraternity members charged were: Robert Caemmerer Jr., 19, of Allenwood, N.J., Brian M. Seiler, 19, of Paramus, N.J.; Corey S. Wilson, 19, of Oceanside, N.Y.; Frank E. Yavalone, 19, of Neptune; Richard A. Pierce, 21, Howard T. Rapp, 21 and Glen A. Hart, 19, who gave the fraternity house as their address.

Barbara Watson forced out of State Department

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford has accepted the forced resignation of Barbara M. Watson as assistant secretary of state for security and consular affairs.

Earlier this year the Nixon administration sought the ouster of Miss Watson, one of the top black officials in government, but backed down under congressional pressure, including protests from the Congressional Black Caucus and other black leaders.

Press Secretary Ron Nessen disclosed Tuesday Ford decided to go along with the Nixon administration's move and accept a pro forma resignation she had submitted the day Ford took office.

Nessen said Leonard F. Walentynowicz, a Buffalo, N.Y., lawyer would be nominated to succeed Miss Watson, who had been appointed to the post in 1968 by President Johnson. Walentynowicz also had been former President Richard M. Nixon's choice for the state Department post.

In accepting Miss Watson's resignation, Ford thanked her for her "many accomplishments throughout your six years of service," and said the country "is very much in your debt."

End of oil depletion allowance a Mills goal

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Rep. Wilbur D. Mills says Congress must act to begin phasing out the oil depletion allowance when it reconvenes next Monday.

In his first interview following his reelection Nov. 5 to a 19th term, the Arkansas Democrat also said Tuesday he would urge President Ford to ask Congress for a wage and price commission. At the same time he called for changes in the individual income tax laws.

Instead of waiting until next January, Mills, chairman of the Ways Means Committee, said Congress must impose an 85 per cent windfall profits tax on oil companies for profits they make in 1974 and 1975.

The windfall profits tax proposal would would allow oil companies to reinvest the profits primarily for research and development of new reserves.

This proposal would be retroactive to last Jan. 1. Mills said he did not want to wait until next year to enact a measure that would be retroactive to Jan. 1, 1974, but he said if Congress chose to wait it was plain that the oil companies have "been on notice about this for a long time" and the same retroactive date could stand.

Mills said the nation needs a wage and price commission to act against future price and wage increases that greatly exceed increases in the cost of living for workers or materials for manufacturers.

The congressman said the commission that he envisioned might in selected cases — he mentioned oil and sugar industry profits — roll back past price increases by some companies if they "exorbitantly exceeded" the price increases the companies had to pay for the goods they use.

The income tax proposals Mills said he wanted action on this year would increase the minimum standard deduction for individual income tax returns for calendar 1974 income from $1,300 to $1,500.

They also would apply to calendar 1975, and perhaps 1974, individual income a maximum standard deduction of 17½ per cent with a limit of $2,500.

The interview was granted on the understanding that Mills would not be questioned about the Oct. 7 Tidal Basin incident in Washington or the illegal gifts to "Draft Mills" groups which promoted his candidacy for the 1972 Democratic presidential nomination.

Burton describes plan to buy 'right woman'

LONDON — Actor Richard Burton is quoted as saying he was planning to advertise for a suitable woman to bear him a son only weeks before be began his romance with Princess Elizabeth of Yugoslavia.

The actor, recently divorced from actress Elizabeth Taylor, said in an interview in "Woman's Own" magazine that he would have paid $40,000 for the right woman.

The right woman would have to give up all legal rights to the child and should be no older than 38. Princess Elizabeth is 38.

Young hobby club

Big set of family games is new national prize

BY CAPPY DICK

Today a brand-new kind of national grand prize is offered to young Cappy Dick contest fans. It's a set of four exciting Whitman Games. Included is a chess set, a backgammon set, the game of Pachisi and, perhaps the most exciting of all, the "71 Games Chest," a large box containing a total of seventy one games.

Complete this square

All the games in each prize collection are fun for the whole family.

Five sets of the Whitman Games will be awarded as the national grand prizes in today's contest, one set to each boy or girl who sends in one of the five neatest and most original correct puzzle solutions. The contest is open to boys and girls in every city where this column is published, including the Fox Cities.

To qualify for a chance to win the Whitman Games, a contestant's entry must first win a local qualifying prize. These will be grab bag awards—selections of "fun" things from Cappy Dick's array of curios, craft packets, and similar fascinating articles for boys and girls. Five grab bag prizes will be awarded in each city for the five neatest and most original correct entries received locally. All the winning entries will then be reviewed by the contest judges to find the five neatest and most original of all. Those five will win the national prizes.

To enter the contest a young reader must fill the blanks in the word square printed above to form words that read the same from left to right as from top to bottom. Here are the clues: for the top row, the four-letter word is something good to eat (one letter is provided in each row). For the second row, the word designates a plane surface. third row, things used in connection with doors and, fourth row, what this puzzle really is.

Print the words in the square, then clip it out and paste it on a piece of paper. Print your name, age, address and zip code beneath it. Decorate the entry in any neat, original way with paints, crayons or cutouts. Finally, address it to Cappy Dick's Midweek Games Contest at The Post-Crescent and mail it before midnight of day after tomorrow.

Tomorrow: Directions for a game called "30 seconds".

Dr. G. C. Thosteson

Stimulants can offset attacks of cataplexy

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband went to a neurologist and was found to have cataplexy. His symptoms are loss of strength in arms and legs when becoming overly excited or overly angry. He does not become unconscious, and immediately gets up after an attack.

The doctor said it could disappear in a short time or could continue indefinitely. Could you give me any idea of what kind of medication might help? — R.R.S.

You have described cataplexy well. It can be a transient loss of strength, or may involve muscle rigidity when the patient is excited.

(It can be a part of narcolepsy involving an abnormal urge to sleep, but you don't mention that in this case.)

Various types of stimulants are used to offset this condition, and I assume from your letter that the neurologist did not prescribe any, evidently preferring to wait and see whether the trouble would pass — as it can do.

But since the trouble is continuing and becoming more frequent, I suggest that your husband go back to the neurologist and tell him how the situation is progressing so he can take appropriate measures.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 18, have high blood pressure and am 65 pounds overweight. My pressure goes as high as 185/110. Do you think it might be dangerous to me? — Mrs. G.B.

I'll say more than "might." It "is" dangerous to you, and the longer it goes on, the more damage it will do. It is high for a person your age.

There's no single, simple answer. You must, of course, start getting rid of that extra poundage. But you should be under the care of a physician because there are various causes of high blood pressure, and a doctor can find out what they are. You can't.

As an added thought, I'm sure you will benefit from reading my booklet, "Controlling Your Blood Pressure." Send 25 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to me in care of The Post-Crescent. Allow four to six weeks for delivery. But get after those first two suggestions immediately.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Yn reference to the little girl who had canker sores so long — I had the same problem with my little girl. She was hospitalized, given smallpox vaccinations, and everything the doctors could think of, but no cure. She couldn't eat.

A druggist, an old-timer, handed me a box of milk of magnesia tablets and said, "Try that." It did the job well and she has never had one since. After all the suffering and the money spent, a 39-cent box of tablets did the trick. — Mrs. H.R.H.

Frankly, canker sores are a baffling problem. We know of no certain remedy. We aren't sure that any single cause is involved. If I knew a sure cure, I'd shout it from the housetops. In the meantime, I'm happy to report a simple remedy that worked.

I have some doubts about smallpox vaccinations for cankers, but that sometimes does work for persistent cold sores — and might sometimes work for cankers.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can a virgin use tampons without endangering her virginity? — N.N.

Yes. Virginity is lost only by sexual contact.

If afflicted with problem fingernails or toenails, learn the practical, medically correct form of treatment. Write to Thosteson in care of The Post-Crescent for a copy of his booklet, "Solving Your Nail Problems," enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents. Allow four to six weeks for delivery.

But he said in view of the Senate's rejection in March of proposed pay raises, including a hike to $52,800 for congressmen, it would be useless to make another try unless Ford asks for it.

"There's no use going through another bloodbath for nothing," said the McGee spokesman. "We're going to have to meet with the President and see if something can be worked out."

But Gross said it would be an outrage for congressmen to vote themselves and other top officials a pay raise while Ford and Congress' Democratic leaders are declaring war on inflation.

Another Iowa Republican, Rep. Bill Scherle, called the proposals a "blueprint to fleece the taxpayers' pockets."

Gross said backers of the pay raise are bent on getting Congress' action during the lameduck session in hopes of getting more votes and letting the old Congress, rather than the new one convening in January, take the blame.

The 92 lameduck House members retiring or defeated in last week's election no longer have anything to lose by voting for a pay raise. And many returning congressmen might be more willing to vote for a pay raise at a time when their next reelection is a full two years away.

Even so, staff experts on both the House and Senate Post Office committees generally agree that pay raise proposals will go nowhere unless Ford and Congress' leaders agree to back one of them. They also agreed that chances for that are poor.

A House source said staff development of pay raise proposals was originally authorized by lameduck House Post Office Committee Chairman Thaddeus J. Dulski, D-N.Y. Dulski could not be reached for comment in his Buffalo, N.Y., district.

Arafat ready to make plea to U.N.

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) — Guerrilla chief Yasir Arafat, surrounded by bodyguards, came to the United Nations today to lead off a fateful debate on Palestine, in an atmosphere throbbing with tension.

Outside U. N. headquarters on the East River, a small group of about 100 demonstrators chanted, "Murderers! Murderers!" as limousines carrying Arafat's aides drew up to the United Nations entrance. Other than that the area was clear and under heavy police guard.

Arafat arrived earlier at the United Nations by helicopter from John F. Kennedy Airport under unprecedented security precautions.

The bearded, 44-year-old leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), was listed to face the General Assembly at 10:30 a. m., EST, but the session was delayed.

A U.N. announcement said at one point the session was rescheduled for noon. Later the time was given as 11:30 a. m.

No reason was given for the delay, but Palestinians who had come to New York earlier in the week had said they expected their leader to speak at noontime.

Just before the scheduled opening of the U.N. General Assembly session, a woman with the Palestinian group told a reporter that 200 copies of an English translation of Arafat's prepared address had been "stolen." She did not elaborate.

There were several police and Coast Guard launches in the East River immediately behind the 39-story glass, steel and stone building.

The 16-acre U.N. complex was closed to the public. Outsiders could enter only with special passes from a temporary outpost across the street.

New York police canceled all days off and redistributed its manpower to concentrate on the midtown Manhattan area, where 16 PLO members were staying in the Waldorf Towers section of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

Police used bomb-sniffing German shepherds to comb through the garage, elevators and five floors where 15 suites were reserved for the PLO delegation, but found nothing. The suites range in price from $150-$450 a day.

Outside, some 1,000 police kept demonstrators away from the hotel. Police sharpshooters were perched in nearby skycrapers and a police helicotper shuttled from the hotel to the U.N. headquarters, keeping an eye out for demonstrations.

The PLO delegation went to U.N. headquarters in three limousines. They were accompanied by two Secret Service cars with agents armed with submachine guns and shotguns.

During a news conference at U.N. headquarters, PLO spokesman Shafig el-Hout said the PLO was at the United Nations for its first "major diplomatic undertaking for the Palestinians' legitimate rights."

He said he wanted to meet reporters "so that our constructive, sustained and purposive dialogue will not be sidetracked by marginal noise and hysterical harassment from any quarter."

He evidently was referring to Russell Kelner, a member of the militant Jewish Defense League, who was arrested Tuesday after threatening to assassinate Arafat, and was ordered held in lieu of $100,000 bail for a hearing Nov. 22.

Police at Kennedy Airport said Arafat was accompanied to the United Nations by his top lieutenant, Farouk Khaddoumi.

Khaddoumi went to the airport in a 20-car motorcade accompanied by eight shotgun-toting police marksmen in bulletproof vests. A police helicopter flew overhead.

Authorities said Arafat arrived at the United Nations at 6:56 a.m., about 40 minutes after his plane touche ' down on a rain-slicked runway at Kennedy.

By the time the aircraft taxied to a halt, heavily armed FBI agents, police and Port Authority officers had surrounded it.

Yasir Arafat

Reporters, gathered in a small knot, were the only other persons on the runway when Arafat arrived.

Port Authority police said two other persons arrived with Arafat on the Pan-Algeria Boeing 707 that left Algiers earlier today. The identities of the two were not disclosed.

Only once before — when Pope Paul VI visited in 1965 — has the General Assembly invited someone not representing a member country to speak before it.

It was also the first time the assembly had debated the "question of Palestine" instead of the problem of the Palestinian refugees driven from their homes by the creation of Israel in 1948.

Arafat was expected to demand nationhood for the Palestinians on the Israeli-occupied west bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip, and to invite the Israelis to join the Palestinians some day in a secular state uniting Moslems, Jews and Christians.

PLO sources said they expected Arafat to stay in New York only a day but that he might attend an Egyptian reception at U.N. headquarters tonight in honor of the PLO delegation.

Hearings reopen on Rockefeller

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nelson A. Rockefeller testified today that he asked his brother Laurance to help find investors to finance a book critical of former Supreme Court Justice Arthur J. Goldberg, his 1970 opponent for New York governor.

The vice presidential nominee's te ...imony portrayed him as more central to the publication of the book than he has so far acknowledged. He said any discrepancies are due to a "sketchy" memory rather than any attempt to cover up the facts.

Testifying before live television cameras in the Senate Caucus Room, Rockefeller told Rules Committee members that a controversial series of loans and gifts by him to close aides and public officials posed no conflict of interest and were not intended to corrupt those who accepted them.

In a counterattack aimed at critics of those transactions, Rockefeller said his family's great fortune does not blind him to the need for morality in public service.

The loans and gifts sprang from a personal sense of "sharing," Rockefeller said, and added: "I do not believe the day has yet come ...where the decencies of human relationships disqualify one for public office."

Some Rockefeller critics have suggested that at least some of the gifts and loans may have violated New York state law. Chairman Howard W. Cannon of the Rules Committee said the "nagging question" lingers as to whether they placed those who received them into "psychological servitude" to Rockefeller — whether or not that was intended.

"There is a sign on the political wall that reads, 'No tipping allowed,'" Cannon said.

It is illegal in New York to give public officials gifts valued at more than $25 with the purpose of influencing or rewarding official conduct. But Rockefeller said he had no such intent.

Rockefeller's gifts also led House Majority Leader Thomas P. O'Neill to express "very grave doubts" about Rockefeller's nomination, though he said he has not decided how to vote.

"I'm not even sure it (the nomination) will be reported out of committee," O'Neill said in an interview with the Boston Globe.

Referring to Rockefeller's statement that he made gifts to officials in other states to lure them to work in his New York state administration, O'Neill asked: "Do governors of wealth buy up competent people? How do you justify that, the prospect of people in public life, to induce them to leave one place to come to your own state? I think that's a serious matter, and I want to know why he gave these huge sums of money to all of those people."

ABC broadcast today's session under a rotation set up by the three major television networks.

Rockefeller later accepted "full responsibility" for the book, apologized to Goldberg for its allegedly derogatory content, and said Laurance Rockefeller had underwritten it for $60,000 as a business investment.

Rockefeller also disclosed that in the years 1957-1974 he gave a total of $3.26 million to Republican campaigns, including $1 million to his own fruitless attempts to win the GOP presidential nomination.

The political gifts included $62,025 to former President Richard M. Nixon's 1972 campaign and $200,000 to the 1968 campaign for the nomination of George M. Romney.

Rockefeller said that over the last 17 years his brothers John, Laurance and David, and his sister Abby gave a total of $2.85 million in support of his four state and three national campaigns.

He said his stepmother, the late Martha Baird Rockefeller, gave him an average of $1.5 million for each of the seven campaigns.

In his opening statement, Chairman Cannon, noted that Rockefeller at first denied any personal involvement in the publication of the book, "Arthur J. Goldberg, the Old and the New," by Victor Lasky.

Among the spectators as the hearing began was Nancy Kissinger, like her husband, Henry A. Kissinger, a former member of the Rockefeller staff. Rockefeller has said one of the gifts — $50,000 — went to Kissinger before he became secretary of state.

Consumers disagree with economic council priorities

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's inflation watchdog agency is directing its first major effort at supermarkets which raise the price of goods already on display. But a prominent consumer organization is boycotting the effort because it says the practice costs shoppers less than a dime a week.

The Council on Wage and Price Stability opens hearings on the practice today. The hearings represent to a large degree the council's ultimate weapon in the government's war on inflation.

Council Director Albert Rees says the hearings follow widespread irritation among consumers who feel they are being gouged by layers of successively higher price stickers on groceries and other products.

But the executive director of Consumers Union, a non-profit product testing organization, declined an invitation to testify.

The official, Rhoda H. Karpatkin, said the issue is simply a sympton, not the cause, of inflation, and could cost a family as little as a dime a week.

If the practice is banned, she said, the supermarkets will make it up elsewhere, such as by maintaining smaller stocks, and this would increase costs much more.

As far as foods on shelves go, Ms. Karpatkin said, the government should enforce drained weight labelling. At present, she said, Consumer's Union has found that the average one pound can contains about 10 ounces of food and the rest liquid.

"Your failure to deal with the serious issues may inevitably lead to speculation over whether these hearings are some form of government put-on," she wrote to Virginia Knauer, President Ford's consumer adviser. Knauer and Rees are cochairing the hearings.

The invitiation to testify was accepted, however, by the Consumer Federation of American and the National

Second storm in two days battering northwest coast of Alaska

NOME, Alaska (AP) — Communities along the storm-battered northwest Alaska coast braced for a second powerful storm today as flood waters began to recede.

No casualties were reported after Bering Sea waves whipped inland by strong winds flooded sections of Nome and surrounding villages in what Gov. William A. Egan called a "full scale disaster."

Nome and some other communities along the coast were without adequate food, drinking water and power as the second storm approached.

Early today forecasters at the National Weather Service in Anchorage were tracking a second storm front that appeared destined to follow closely follow the trail of the first hurricaneforce winds.

"Right now this second storm is near Adak Island in the Aleutian chain and it's going eastward at a very fast rate," said forecaster Dave Evanson. "I think it will turn northeastward and go into the western part of Alaska and follow the same pattern except we expect this one will be more to the east and therefore more inland."

Evanson said the storm center will come close to Nome but is likely to be a greater threat to surrounding villages.

The weather service said flood waters in the area were dropping early today but portions of Nome which had been under five feet of water were still covered.

Some buildings were destroyed. Residents battled the floodwaters in high winds and freezing temperatures.

The winds propelled huge waves inland Tuesday. Residents were trying frantically to sandbag Nome's electric power plant to keep water from the batteries powering teletype circuits and emergency phones — the only link with the outside world.

Emergency shelters were set up in schools in this town of 2,500 on the Bering Sea.

"This town is hurt and hurt badly. But this town has been hurt before. It has always come back and will come back again," Mayor Robert Renshaw said Tuesday night.

KNOM radio in Nome said the east end of Nome had been evacuated and one road "continues to be struck by fierce waves. The east end is a jumble of houses knocked one against an other.

"Nearby barges, which slid off their supports, were responsible for the damage to east end dwellings," the station said. Only four houses were left standing in that part of town, KNOM said.

Charter airplanes carrying disaster personnel and communications equipment and technicians from Anchorage were foiled in their initial landing attempts by high winds and a thick coat of ice on the runway at Nome. RCA Alaska said one plane later managed to land.

Nome residents hauled water from springs and doled it out a can at a time. Two main streets were flooded, but a third was above the rampaging waters and the Civil Defense Office said food supplies could last only several days.

Brillion backs tennis court application

BY JANICE JOHNSON
Post-Crescent correspondent

BRILLION — The City Council Monday authorized the preparation of a resolution supporting an application for park development funds by the joint school district for tennis court construction.

The city has been granted a five-year period of eligibility to apply for state funds, which this year total $17,000 for Calumet County for two separate projects. However, in the discussion, the council said it would not permit its own application for funds for developing the newly acquired Arndt Park to be jeopardized by the school's application, and considers the park the first priority.

Proposed 1974 development of the park includes grading at $4,000; seeding, $2,500; construction of two tennis courts, $14,000; and developing 12 parking stalls, $500, for a total of $21,000. State aids would contribute 50 per cent of the total, leaving $6,000 available to the district.

Another application would be made again next year for further development of the park. McMahon and Associates, city engineers, will be asked for an update on the status of the park fund application.

A bid opening had been scheduled for a new squad car, but the police and fire committee noted that an error had been made in the bid advertisement, which specified a four-barrel carburetor, and recommended that the bids be tabled and the car rebid. A tie vote resulted on a motion to rebid, and Mayor Clarence Wolf cast the deciding vote in favor of rebidding. Bids will be opened at 8 p.m. Dec. 9.

The council voted to accept a recommendation from the utility commission that six lots in the R.D. Peters third subdivision be accepted by the city in lieu of sewer and water assessments against the 13-lot subdivision. Approximately one-half of the subdivision is in a floodplain.

The question was raised on how the city can assess benefits on an area that quite possibly could not be developed. Assessments on the entire subdivision total approximately $6,100. The council decided that the land could be well utilized because the land east of Glenview Avenue could provide a site for sewer plant expansion, and land west of Glenview would be desirable for future park and green area.

McMahan representative Tom Probst will be present at the next council meeting to discuss the status of the city's application for sewer plant expansion aids. Public Works Director Larry Brown said, he had been told by the Department of Natural Resources that changes in priority status are expected to be made within the next few months and might mean a lower priority for Brillion.

Wolf, however, said he is "looking confidently" for more funds to become available on July 1 and possibly an improvement in the city's status.

In other business, a decision will be made before the end of the week on the balance of the storm sewer route. The last portion of the project was bid on three alternate routes and proposals offered by two landowners involved are

Waupaca OKs $2.6 million school budget

BY FERN SMITH
Post-Crescent staff writer

WAUPACA — The board of education Tuesday approved a school district budget of $2,670,742, calling for a tax rate of $14.71 per $1,000 of equalized valuation.

The certified 1974 equalized valuation of $110,512,800 for the district represents an increase of 15 per cent over last year's full value of $95,830,000.

Estimated state aids will be $872,188 and other anticipated revenues $172,461. The budget requires a property tax levy of $1,626,093, which is 31 per cent higher than the previous year.

With equalized valuation up 15 per cent and a budget increase of 19 per cent, the 10 municipalities which comprise the school district will have to raise $388,971 more in taxes for the 1974-75 school budget.

This year the City of Waupaca's school levy is increased $127,429. Other increases are: Town of Belmont, $4,413; Town of Lanark, $7,503; Town of Dayton, $67,699; Town of Farmington, $96,118; Town of Lind, $20,701; Town of St. Lawrence, $3,601; Town of Scandinavia, $5,678; Town of Waupaca, $51,026; and the Town of Saxeville, $722.

Municipal clerks will receive their certified school district levies from Clerk Randall Bremmer by Thursday.

Supt. Len Brittelli explained to the board of education that since August, when the proposed budget was first presented, there have been contradictions and speculation about the figures.

"When the final certification came, we found it necessary to increase our estimated tax rate $1.80 per $1,000 of equalized valuation," he said.

The budget has been altered by an increase of only $6,200 since it was presented on Aug. 23. There was an increase in instruction of $7,882 and a reduction in capital outlay of $1,682.

Funds are restored for social services

BY DON CASTONIA
Post-Crescent staff writer

Differences in philosophy on how to handle budgeting for new personnel sparked most of the budget debate Tuesday in which the Outagamie County Board restored all of the money to the social services budget that had been recommended cut by County Executive Alvin Woehler.

Efforts by the board of social services and health committee to get approval for three additional social workers in the juvenile services area and for two additional people in the county nurse's office were blocked at least temporarily by a decision to await a report later in the week from a consulting firm making a job study for the county.

In budget actions, the board:

- Approved full funding for the Big Brothers program for 1975;
- Approved a social services department budget as recommended by the finance committee;
- Approved budgets for law enforcement and courts basically as recommended by the exeuctive and finance committee, and
- On Monday night approved an airport operations budget unchanged from executive and finance committee recommendations.

The board also went on record supporting the board of social services in its contract stand with the state. The state-proposed contract for the county to administer social services programs is about $52,000 less than what James Stampp, department director, said is needed.

The three social workers requested would handle juvenile deliquency cases assigned by juvenile court. Stampp told the board that the caseload has nearly doubled since the first of the year. There was a caseload of about 100 at the start of the year and four social workers in that unit. Stampp said 25 cases per worker is considered normal. The present caseload is 169, according to Supv. Herman Ripp, social services board chairman.

Stampp said a recent survey revealed that only five of the juvenile cases came from welfare families and that 20 per cent came from business and professional families.

Under an unwritten board policy, all personnel requests are handled at the time the department budget is passed on by the board. But Supv. Sylvester Lenz, chairman of the personnel committee, asked that consideration be delayed until Thursday afternoon when a report would be available from Dickson and Associates, Neenah, that would include a recommendation on the positions.

Supv. John Kellogg, a member of the social services board, sought to have a set amount of money included in the budget to cover the positions, contending that putting off action until the end of the week would simply result in burying the issue. "What better time is there to discuss the need than now?" he asked. Supv. Ted LaPin agreed. "I favor handling budget items as they come up," he said.

Supv. Gene Retzlaff contended that the positions should be created before they are funded, which prompted Supv. Daniel Verstegen, another member of the social services board, to comment that it appeared they were "involved in the Outagamie shuffle again."

"You can't do anything between budgets and you can't do anything at budget time," Verstegen said.

The personnel committee prevailed on the social workers and on a similar attempt by Kellogg to get money placed in the budget for a third county nurse and part-time clerical help for the department.

The Big Brothers program, as approved, calls for spending $39,235 in the county next year for matches referred through the Department of Social Services. The United Fund will pay $5,393 of that cost, leaving $33,832 to be funded by the county. This is $9,000 more than had been recommended by the finance committee.

There were, however, no arguments against the program itself. Woehler, who had eliminated the program from his budget on the grounds that it needed a new approval from the county board, said he felt it was "an essential program, but the degree of support is your decision."

Ripp urged full funding for Big Brothers, saying it was the "best preventative program we have. Don't restrict it." Verstegen also defended it on the grounds that it was the only juvenile

Special education moves ahead

CHILTON — "We are growing and expanding in our special education program under the Cooperative Educational Service Agency (CESA), No. 10, according to Hilda Cavanaugh, educational consultant.

Cavanaugh gave a brief review of the history of Calumet County's special education program at the special education group's regular meeting Tuesday at the courthouse.

She said the program started with two units, has grown to eight and is still growing. She said state Department of Public Instruction (DPI) directives are followed and that, as a bonus, the CESA board is preparing a program to check every child who has been evalauted and connected to the program to see what progress is being made.

She noted that the New Holstein district's high school program has just been completed. She said the program started in 1970 with 17 children. Of this total three had moved away and there was one dropout.

Cavanaugh added that of the 14 students, nine were gainfully employed and four are engaged in on-the-job training. She believed the high school program has proven itself.

The members agreed with Cavanaugh's statements. She will continue her survey into the Brillion district and find where the students have gone from that special program.

Ervin W. Stankevitz, who presided over the meeting, said he was proud to see all the administrators of schools present and that the special education children had been accepted in the regular school routine.

John Melcher, assistant superintendent of public instruction—exceptional children, touched on the responsibilities and duties of the public schools to special education. Melcher said the law is not new. He referred to the constitution which provides for free education for all people, the only difference is that now the law has become mandatory.

"We will see the 5142 board under the unified services board and the handicapped childrens' board working closer together, picking up where the other left off. This is important, we must get together and move in good faith to make progress. If we do not, only the children will suffer, Melcher said.

He stressed the importance that all children with handicaps, no matter what they are or are suspected of being, must be evaluated by the multidisciplinary team. This evaluation should take place every three years or sooner if it is thought that the child is making more progress than usual or not enough progress.

Mrs. James Knauf, Chilton School Board member, asked if the school district would be responsible for paying for a child's needs if the parent refuses to have the child evaluated and the child is in need of special education. Melcher said that the child must be evaluated by the multidisciplinary team. He thought that if the parents are shown that the child needs special help and that the school board is placed in a strange position because the parents won't let the child be evaluated, this may cast a different light on the evaluation measure. If the parents persist and do not go along, then the parent must provide for that education. So many times, Melcher said, parents tend to build legal cases out of this evaluation and they end up in a long line of legal entanglements which takes time from the child in which he or she could be learning.

Melcher also referred to Wisconsin Chapter 307, which provides for a special speech therapist to now go into the private schools to set up programs for children who have speech defects. These children too must go through the evaluation and the school authorities must request this service of their respective school boards.

John Voores, special education director, said he would like to have the district administrators sit down and decide if there are other programs needed which could be funded, noting that the county board would have to decide if it would match this funding for such programs in the county. It was suggested that Voores meet with the county finance committee and then make a decision. Voores emphazied that the request must come from the administrators and the county board must be willing to finance a portion of the program before he could make application for such program under Title 6.

Froehlich, Steiger on 'crucial' list

WASHINGTON — Wisconsin Reps. Harold Froehlich of Appleton and William Steiger of Oshkosh have been singled out by Common Cause lobbyists as two of 76 House Republicans considered "crucial" to overriding President Ford's veto of the Freedom of Information Act amendments.

The self-styled public interest lobbying organization has issued the list as part of an effort to assure that the veto will be overridden by Congress. Some respected observers consider an override likely anyway.

Neither Steiger nor Froehlich could be reached Tuesday to give his views on the veto, which Common Cause said it expects to come up shortly after Congress convenes in lame duck session next Monday.

None of Wisconsin's other seven congressmen is on the list.

Common Cause, a spokesman revealed, has not contacted the two congressmen.

Rather, the spokesman said, Steiger and Froehlich are the only Republican members of Wisconsin's House delegation who voted to override former President Nixon's veto of the War Powers Act.

"This is the same kind of institutional question," the spokesman said. The organization will conduct a "head count" of congressmen Wednesday to determine more accurately where members stand on the information act veto, the spokesman said.

The War Powers Act was an effort by Congress to reinforce its power to revoke a president's decision to send troops into a foreign country. The Freedom of Information Act amendments, which were sent to President Ford on Oct. 7, would attempt to loosen the grip of the executive branch upon various types of government documents.

Ford declared in his veto message Oct. 17 that he believes the bill would cut too deeply into executive branch authority to keep military and diplomatic secrets, would weaken confidentiality of FBI and other investigative law enforcement materials and would allow too little time for agencies to respond to information requests and appeals.

Common Cause argues that the bill "plugs loopholes in the law that government bureaucrats have used to withhold public information from reporters and others who have a legitimate interest in obtaining it."

Steiger and Froehlich are two of four Republicans in the Wisconsin delegation. Reps. Vernon Thomson, Richland Center, and Glenn Davis, Waukesha, are the other two Republicans.

Staff workers for both Froehlich and Steiger expressed puzzlement that their bosses had been placed on the list.

The House-Senate conference report on the bill passed in the House by a 349-2 vote with all nine Wisconsin representatives voting for passage.

CHILTON — The board of education has approved sharing the services of the speech therapist with a private school in the district under Chapter 307 of the Wisconsin statutes.

Appearing at the regular board meeting Monday evening were members of the board of education from Holy Trinity School in Jericho and Rep. Gervase Hephner, D-Chilton, author of the bill making it permissible to have this service for private school pupils.

Hephner said he had assumed the board was providing this service. School Supt. A.W. Gordon replied that no formal request had been made by any of the private schools. There was no provision in this year's budget for additional staff and the speech therapist's time is utilized fully with present students, he added. The speech therapist does most of her work at the first grade room rented by the school district at the Consolidated School.

Robert Garfield, elementary principal, said the therapist now comes two half days, and suggested that an additional half day perhaps could be provided through the Cooperative Educational Service Agency No. 10. The therapist would go to the Jericho school, rather than transporting the pupils.

There are now 78 children in the program, 49 of whom come under the Chapter 89 provision, Garfield explained. All children suspected of having a speech defect must be screened by the multidisciplinary team.

Garfield said schools in the district wishing the services of the speech therapist must make a request to the board of education, and the Jericho school officials then did so.

Tom Stockton of the Department of Public Instruction was present to discuss education of the handicapped under the provisions of Chapter 89. After much discussion it was made clear that no matter what type of handicap a child has, he or she must be evaluated by the multidisciplinary team for special education needs, whether it be in transportation, supplies or physical help.

No bids were received in the district-owned McHale home on S. Madison Street. Bids will be held open for one more month.

Tabled for more information was the request of Mr. and Mrs. Darrel Loose, route 4, Chilton, to have their two children picked up by the bus. The children are in grades 1 and 3 at Trinity Lutheran School. The request to pick up the children at the Looses' drive would involve a route change and turn-around. The board has been denying requests involving turn-arounds on the basis of safety and as time consuming. Mrs. Loose appeared before the board and said the children must walk about two-tenths of a mile to get on the bus. The board also adopted a policy that has been worked out by the Wisconsin Association of School Boards on the maintenance and confidentiality of student records.

Mrs. Mary Knauf was appointed delegate to the association's convention Jan. 22-24 in Milwaukee and Richard Boshardt is the alternate.

In other action the board:

- Tabled the issue of fiber glass being used in construction of the elementary school until a special meeting tentatively set for 1:30 p.m. Thursday to discuss this material.
- Heard a report by Michael Fitzpatrick on computer-managed instruction.
- Approved a maintenance policy with Wisconsin Public Service for two outdoor lights at a cost of $4.68 each.
- Denied the request of the Bay Lakes Council of survey the children about scouting.
- Approved team reports and program recommendations for students requiring speech services under Chapter 89.

Joint city, school meeting postponed to Dec. 11 at New London

NEW LONDON — The meeting between the City Council Public Property Committee and a committee from the school board that had been scheduled for Thursday has been postponed until 7:30 p.m. Dec. 11, Ald. Robert Flease, chairman of the property committee, has announced.

The meeting is planned to discuss proposed improvements the school district has requested at the bus garage, which it rents from the city. Added exhaust fans, heat, electrical outlets and outside outlets have been requested by school officials.

Librarians rap Playboy Club as meeting site

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — A group of Madison librarians are protesting the site of last week's Wisconsin Library Association state convention at the Playboy Club in Lake Geneva.

Fourteen Madison librarians, in a letter to leaders of the statewide group, said they resented having the convention at a resort associated with unfair female stereotypes.

"Financial support of an institution trading on worn out stereotypes of womanhood is not in our best interests," they said. "Libraries and librarians are striving for public support, and conventions held in sybaritic, plastic splendor strike a false note in the sincerity of our pleas for such support."

They said many librarians refused to attend the convention because it was held at the Playboy Club.

Coal on hand, foundry sees little strike effect

WAUPACA — The coal miner's strike, predicted to last three weeks, will not immediately affect the production schedule of the Waupaca Foundry, if there are no unforeseen complications, according to Irving Petersen, assistant to the president.

"We are safe for 30 days, Petersen said. "We have an adequate supply on the ground for that period and anticipate that our domestic producers will continue to ship on schedule. At this point, we have been told that these schedules will hold."

He added that his firm has done everything possible to protect itself. With normal production, the foundry uses 750 tons of coke per week as the melting agent in its cupolas during a 16-hour daily operation.

The firm receives 65 per cent of its supply from domestic sources — Coppers Coke of St. Paul, Minn., and Milwaukee Solvay, Milwaukee. Most of the supply of Coppers Coke for the winter is stockpiled at Duluth before the close of the navigation season on Lake Superior.

The Waupaca Foundry imports 35 per cent of its coke from Germany and England. The English source was stopped in mid-October and the foundry now is relying on its shipments from Germany.

"One threat to our supply of coke might be a government order that our domestic producers turn over their stockpiles to the utilities," Petersen said. "Also, there is no way we can predict what an extended power shortage, brought about by a short supply of coke, could have on our customers. There might be cutbacks in the automotive and yard and garden machinery industry. This could have serious, far-reaching effects on our sales."

Schools urged to cut waste

CHILTON — Several gripes were aired at the regular school board meeting Monday with proposals to "tighten our belts" and "set priorities."

Robert Koehler, board member, questioned how many late buses were being used by the district to transport students home from after-school, extracurricular activities.

Robert Garfield, elementary principal and transportation coordinator, said three buses are used during football season; and during basketball season, two buses. He noted that the normal schedule for these buses is 5:15-6 p.m., but the time depends on when practice can be held after school. He said that at least 10 students have to be signed up in the school office before a late bus is scheduled.

Koehler, who has been an opponent of using late buses since he was elected to the board of education, said, "At the present time, when the country is in the economic condition it is, it seems rather ridiculous to have these late buses." He said he is going to fight late bus scheduling, adding that rural people already are feeling the economic pinch.

Mary Knauf, clerk, questioned the structure of language in the Hilcrest, the school newspaper. She did not question the intent in the letters to the editor or other articles, but said they could be stated better and said it should be corrected. She said the publication of the newspaper should be a learning experience. The paper should not be viewed as a rag to put just anything in.

Mrs. Knauf based her statement on articles in the last Hilcrest edition, which discussed free physical exams by doctors and the language and conduct of the athletic director. She also requested Principal James Skarda to have the Hilcrest editors and advisers meet with the board at the next meeting.

There were also complaints about library books not being stamped out, unnecessary lights being used and wasted paper. Mrs. Knauf also noted that, because of the high cost of sugar, the home economics department should cut down on its Christmas cookie baking this a year.

After the complaints were aired, the board recommended that the administration send a letter to all teachers advising them to be economical in their classrooms.

Seymour council to consider extra wastewater treatment plant help

BY ALICE BOGENSCHUTZ
Post-Crescent correspondent

SEYMOUR — The City Council Monday was presented with a request from Orlin Bishop, wastewater plant operator, additional full-time help at the city's plant.

Aldermen did not reach a decision but will consider it as they work on the new budget.

Bishop explained that the Environmental Protection Agency rulings coming down through the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) require more accurate water testing and more reports to be filled out. He said this is time consuming. The department would like to train one of its part-time employes for the water testing job and other duties.

Bishop said they are having no problem with the DNR regulations now because he has been able to haul sludge from the holding tank. However, some problems could arise with the onset of a rainy season or winter.

The department would like to train a part-time employe for the testing and other duties so that in the event of sickness or vacations a qualified person is able to take over.

The city will need a new treatment plant in a year or two but so far has been unable to obtain funds for the project, it was noted.

The council approved the purchase of a flow meter from Badger Co. for the water department at a cost of $1,350. The estimated cost of installation is $600. The unit will be installed by city crews.

Emanuel Malueg appeared before the council regarding an application for a 24- by 30-foot building to be built on a lot adjoining his property on E. Pearl Street. It would be used for his wife's plaster casting business. Currently the business is located on Main Street.

The area is zoned residential and the council told Malueg he will have to petition for rezoning and a public hearing will have to be conducted.

John Salco, a new policeman, will assume his position with the police department Thursday. A state retirement plan for city employes was discussed. Currently only policeman are covered by retirement. The cost to the city would run about $12,000 per year if it picks up the employe 5 per cent deduction. It was noted that once under this plan, the city cannot change to a private plan. Action was delayed on the issue until Earl Gosse, public works superintendent, checks with the city employes to see if they are in favor of this type of a retirement plan.

Parent-teacher conferences set

NEW LONDON — Parent-teacher conferences for grades 7 and 8 at Washington Junior High School have been scheduled for Thursday and Friday.

Seventh and eighth graders will not have classes those days, but freshmen will follow their regular schedules.

Principal Louis Sheahan said the parents have established a long record of more than 90 per cent participation at the conferences, and said the school had more than 98 per cent attendance last year.

Persons with questions can contact the junior high office.

Some common sense about cars.

Buying a new car now is a good investment. For you and for our economy.

Compared to earlier models, our new cars conserve valuable fuel. A breakthrough in emissions control gives better performance and more miles per gallon. New cars require less scheduled maintenance, so they cost less to operate. And with today's higher used car values, the amount needed to buy a new car is lower than most people think.

When you buy a new car, you help America's economy. Your purchase can contribute to growth for the nation. It can pay off in more jobs, more revenue for government, more strength for businesses—large and small. This helps everyone.

Right now is the time to buy a new car. It's a common-sense investment for you and for our country.

being considered. Persons considering buying the golf course, which is involved in one of the routes, were present Monday to say they also would have a proposal to submit within a few days. A special meeting was called for 9 p.m. Wednesday to complete the route so the contractor can continue work.

Park funding application and a report from the finance committee about application for a community development block grant from the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) will also be on the agenda.

A snowmobile ordinance was discussed briefly with an opinion received from legal counsel. However, action was postponed pending further study.

No further word was received from the police and fire committee on the evaluation of the merits of a parking district in the city's downtown renewal project, but a resolution approving the redevelopment plan, as proposed by the redevelopment authority, received a first reading.

The police and fire committee recommended that stop signs be placed on the corner of Glenview and Wolfschmidt streets, Glenview at the east and west intersections with State 114, and on the corner of W. Water and Elm streets. A hearing on the signs was set for 8:30 p.m. Dec. 9.

The committee also reported that an investigation into a citizen request for no parking on several downtown streets, close to Main Street, found no sufficient reason to limit parking at this time.

Dennis Behnke, recreation center director, reported that at a recent meeting with architects regarding condensation problems at the community center, the firm could offer no definite assurances that the problems could be corrected in the $40,000 improvement proposal it submitted. The park board decided to repair walls at an estimated $5,350, seal gutters and windows at a cost of $3,500 and run the ventilating system dry at the risk of increased fuel costs.

A hearing regarding a rezoning request on land owned by the Brillion Co-op along 114, to allow expansion of bulk storage facilities, became little more than a formality after a letter was read from the co-op withdrawing the request. The council then voted against the change from agriculture to industrial open.

In other action, the council:

- Upheld a recommendation from the health and welfare committee that an old coal shed on Custer Street, belonging to Jentinks Chevrolet Olds be razed. The landowner will be notified.
- Approved the installation of sewer and water laterals at Harwood Hendricks' expense to service his property at the end of Cleveland Street, under the supervision of the director of public works.
- Approved a proposal to maintain a center "island" on Hiawatha Drive. Residents wish to have a green area. Residents will pay the costs for curb and gutter and will be credited for costs that would have been incurred by blacktopping.
- Received a complaint from Win Reimer about drainage north of Horn Street, which he said has been impaired because of installation of a storm sewer on the south side of Horn. The council said it was not creating any additional problems, but agreed to have city engineers look at the situation.
- Approved the transfer of the liquor license of Edward Vogel from 201 N. Main Street to a new building at 219 N. Main. It held an application for a Class D fermented malt beverage license to Darrell Vogel at the old address, pending the necessary publication.
- Learned that some progress has been made on the renovation of the Lake Hugo lagoon with damaged culvert replaced. It is anticipated that the rest of the project should be completed shortly.
- Received a letter from Roland Tonn, county planner, regarding the updating of the county recreation plan to include municipal recreation plans, as adopted. Tonn will be asked to appear with further information at a December meeting.
- Received a letter from the East-Central Wisconsin Regional Planning Commission, regarding the possibility of a joint, county-wide meeting of municipal officials to discuss the impact of the HUD special flood hazard maps. The meeting would be in early December.
- Authorized the preparation of a resolution supporting a proposed county park area at Becker's Lake, to be sent to the county board.

Wolf reported that the city will supply 12.4 per cent of all dollars raised for county purposes this year, a figure surpassed only by the Town of Harrison. He noted this is "both good and bad" and attributed the dubious honor to a substantial increase in the equalized value of the city.

Squealing tires won't be legal in Outagamie

In a few weeks, it will be illegal in Outagamie County for the driver of a motor vehicle to "accelerate . . . so as to emit an unnecessary noise as a result of the friction caused between the tires and the surface on which the vehicle travels."

In other words, you can't squeal your tires when you take off from a stop. Not only that, but if you try it on gravel (which doesn't squeal) you'll be breaking the law for causing your tires to throw stones.

This new county law was passed by the county board Tuesday, but not as part of the traffic code. The offense will be a violation of the disorderly conduct ordinance.

Supv. John Hennessy questioned the need for such a law and suggested it be tabled until the need was substantiated.

But Supv. Fred Rehfeldt, a member of the sponsoring judiciary committee, objected. "It seems odd that we should question a resolution like this," he said. "The police can't control the problem. It'll be good to correct these lousy boys and get rid of it."

Supv. John Marzion, looking over other paragraphs of the disorderly conduct ordinance, suggested that it was written to get rid of the county board. "We've already violated Section A," he said, referring to the paragraph dealing with boisterous and loud conduct.

The section on tire squealing was passed on a 30-8 vote.

Clintonville women set third prayer breakfast

CLINTONVILLE — Women of all churches have been invited to the Woman's Club third annual prayer breakfast at 10 a.m. Tuesday at Christus Lutheran Church. The theme of the event is "A Time to Share."

Ministers of community churches will be special guests and will be introduced by a woman from each church.

More than 100 women attended this ecumenical occasion last year.

This year, the program will include a welcome by Mrs. Marlin Steinbach, president; responsive reading by Mrs. Burr Tolles, program chairman; and Bible reading by Julia Boe and Mrs. G. R. McCauley.

Ministers attending the event will be: the Rev. Milford Olson, Bethany Evangelical Free Church; the Rev. Robert Thaden, Christ Congregational Church; the Rev. A. M. Knier, St. Rose Catholic Church; the Rev. Eugene Peterson and the Rev. James Magelssen, Christus Lutheran Church; the Rev. Norman Stephenson, United Methodist Church; and the Rev. G. R. Brueggemann and the Rev. C. W. Koenig, St. Martin Lutheran Church.

Special music will be provided by Mark Joy and the prayer will be directed by Mrs. Dave Thomas. Mrs. John Buehrens and Mrs. Lyle Harrison are cochairmen of the breakfast.

Outagamie funds restored...

deliquency prevention program in operation in the county.

The funds are used to do screening investigations of the men who volunteer to be big brothers.

The only change made in the finance recommendations on law enforcement and courts budgets was to restore $550 to the sheriff's budget to purchase one electric typewriter. Sheriff Calvin Spice had requested three electric typewriters and all three had been cut by Woehler and the finance committee.

A finance committee recommendation that a $3,000 seminar fund request by Judge Nick Schaefer be cut to $1,500 was approved, but an effort by Supv. George Kroes to further cut it to $500 failed.

The money was to cover Schaefer's attendance at a four-week judges school and a one-week conference for himself and Mark Van Thiel, coordinator for the Volunteers in Probation program. The finance committee had reasoned that only one person should attend at county expense.

Kroes, chairman of the highway committee, claimed that the county is "paying the judges enough that we don't have to pay their vacation in Florida." He argued that the judges "should be treated like the rest of the county employes. This is just a $3,000 vacation."

Three months ago the board failed to act on a highway committee request to pay the expenses of Highway Commissioner Clarence Brownson to attend a convention in Portland, Ore., which he plannned to attend while on vacation.

The department of social services budget as approved by the board now stands at $1,030,606 for administration and service programs funded under that listing. This is $96,798 more than recommended in Woehler's executive budget. Revenues for administration were set at $914,173, a drop of $18,916.

Other major budgets approved so far include:

District attorney, $111,459, unchanged from executive budget; drug investigation squad, $36,570, unchanged; County Court Branch 1, $37,444, unchanged; Branch 2, $98,097, down $1,500; Branch 3, $82,327, unchanged; Circuit Court, $49,431, unchanged;

Register in probate, $50,688, unchanged; sheriff, $240,654, down $50; traffic police, $302,869, down $16,957 (duplication of funds eliminated); police radio, $104,555, unchanged; process server, $28,757, unchanged, and jail, $113,623, unchanged.

Seymour accepts police car bid

SEYMOUR — A lease bid from Mielke Motor Co. of $267 per month on a 1975 Pontiac Catalina for use as a police car was accepted Monday night by the City Council.

The car is fully equipped, except for air conditioning. The car is to be leased for two years with a change in vehicles at 50,000 miles.

The Mielke Motor bid was the lower of the two bids. The car is to be delivered to the police department in 30 days.

UWFV expansion vote delayed in Winnebago

OSHKOSH — There will be a delay of at least six weeks in the Winnebago County board's decision on whether an additional 10 acres of land will be purchased to provide for future expansion of the University of Wisconsin -Fox Valley Campus.

Instead of reconsidering its action of two weeks ago, when it turned down the move by an 18-23 vote, the board decided to go along with a recommendation from Supv. George Christoph to appoint a special study committee

But, despite the delay, there's still hope, which likely would not have been the case had the board opted for reconsideration during its session Monday night.

It was a shrewd parliamentary move by Supv. Roland Kampo which essentially ruled out any hope of having money for the county's share of the $100,000 land purchase placed in the 1975 budget.

Although Kampo had voted for the purchase the first time around, last week during a finance committee meeting he informally indicated that he would not vote the same way again. By excluding it from the budget document, Kampo can avoid having to change his vote since chances of getting the necessary two-thirds vote are extremely slim even it he votes in favor of it.

Supv. David Nobbe, Neenah, who voted against the purchase in the previous action, had intended to ask for reconsideration prior to adoption of the budget. Had he succeeded, a simple majority vote of the board would have been all that was needed to to pass it.

Kampo, however, quickly asked that the budget resolution be moved up on the agenda before Nobbe could ask for reconsideration. By adopting the budget first, a two-thirds majority is now needed to spend money which is not included in the budget document. Campus Dean Rue Johnson urged the board to reconsider its action and spend the money to buy the land so that it would be there when and if expansion was needed.

He pointed out that the campus serves a contingent of students which might not attend college otherwise. The students can live at home while attending school, which is more economical than attending at University campuses at either Oshkosh or Green Bay. The board also received a petition signed by some 1,200 persons urging the supervisors to reconsider and authorize the land purchase.

During the board's reserved time for public appearances, it was pointed out that several students were in the gallery and perhaps wanted to voice their feelings.

However, Supv. Clarence Loehning, Neenah, said, "Mr. Chairman, I didn't come here tonight to listen to students. Discussion can only be heard on resolutions that are in our packet." Several days prior to each board meeting, an envelope containing all resolutions scheduled to come before the board are sent out and debate usually centers around those items which are on the agenda.

Johnson, however, was given time to talk and he explained that purchasing the land would be a good indication to the University Board of Regents that Winnebago and Outagamie counties were committed to the campus and could insure continued University support.

Currently the two counties pay costs of maintaining the physical plant while the University system provides all program financing.

The additional 10 acres, which is now under option at $10,000 an acre, is available through a land contract at 4 per cent interest.

Johnson explained that the land likely would be used to construct a physical education facility at an estimated cost of $350,000. However, he stressed that "all we're asking for at the present time is the land purchase, not funds for the facility."

Christoph asked if the county could ever get its money back if the University system decided to assume control of all two-year campuses.

Johnson responded that the "chances are politically excellent" that the county would. "I don't think the legislature would absorb $30 million worth of county property without some type of reimbursement."

Christoph, calling for the board chairman to appoint a special study committee, explained, "I'm still not satisfied. I'd like to see a complete study of the expansion program."

At the end of the meeting, when the action to appoint the committee came on a 23-14 vote (Kampo by this time had left to attend a Town of Menasha board meeting) Supv. Archie Daggett, one of the campus trustees, asked, "Why haven't we heard a move for reconsideration?

"I'm disappointed," Daggett said, readily agreeing with County Board Chairman James Coughlin that he (Daggett) had been "out-maneuvered by Kampo."

But he added, "Iguess a half a loaf is better than none," conceding that the hope now rests on the committee's findings.

Tuesday, Coughlin said he would appoint the study group this week and indicated that it might include the board's building and grounds committee, plus four interested citizens from the Neenah-Menasha area.

In retrospect, Coughlin added, "It's too bad that the reconsideration didn't come up before the budget adoption."

Attorney wants Turner statements suppressed

FOND DU LAC, Wis. (AP) — Washington County Circuit Judge Milton Meister delayed immediate ruling after a pretrial hearing Tuesday for Gerald Turner, charged in the death of a Fond du Lac girl more than a year ago.

Turner, 25, Fond du Lac, remained in custody in lieu of $100,000 bond on charges of first degree murder and sexual perversion concerning Lisa French, 9, who disappeared while trick or treating on Halloween a year ago. Her body was found three days later in a field near here and Turner was arrested last Aug. 8.

The hearing was on a defense motion to suppress as evidence statements Turner allegedly made to authorities the day he was arrested. Turner's attorneys claim he made the statements involuntarily.

The defense also has moved for a change of venue, claiming publicity has prejudiced the case. Meister said he would delay ruling on that motion until all pretrial motions have been heard and disposed.

Turner testified Tuesday he and the French girl had been neighbors at one time.

He also testified that authorities asked him Aug. 2 to go to Madison for polygraph tests concerning the investigation. He said he did not want to go, but consented to do so because he felt he had nothing to hide.

Gerrard to stay on as Democratic chairman

LA CROSSE, Wis. (AP) — Wisconsin Democratic State Chairman William Gerrard said Tuesday he does not plan to resign in the near future.

Gerrard, who earlier this year said he was considering quitting but then decided to stay on at least until after last week's elections, said he will not step down until the state party's debts are reduced and a smooth transition can be made to another chairman.

He refused to set a timetable for his resignation.

Jordahl dealings to be discussed

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Gov. Patrick J. Lucey probably will meet with State Ethics Board Executive Director Roth Judd later this month about land dealings allegedly made by Natural Resources Board Chairman Harold C. Jordahl Jr., a spokesman for the governor said Tuesday.

Robert Dunn, Lucey's executive secretary, said Jordahl's situation "is a matter that ought to be discussed with the governor."

Jordahl was accused in September by a Department of Natural Resources manager of purchasing an 80-acre tract in Burnett County which the DNR had wanted to annex to a game refuge and then selling the tract at a profit.

He also was reported to have acquired a 132-acre tract in Richland County where a recreation lake was being considered.

Jordahl said the State Ethics Board has found no conflict of interest between his real estate dealings and his role with the Natural Resources Board.

Dunn said Monday the governor's office had received no material on the Ethics Board action and Jordahl has not made his holdings public.

The meeting betweeen Lucey and Judd would take place after Nov. 19 when Lucey is expected to return from vacation, Dunn said.

Dunn said the governor probably would make a statement after the meeting.

Selassie under guard

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Deposed Emperor Haile Selassie has been taken back to the Grand Palace, housed under an Army guard in a luxury suite with his daughter, according to reliable sources. The former monarch had been held in an army headquarters since his removal as head of state on Sept. 12.

Clapp supports long truck use

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Double bottomed trailers would be more economical than the smaller trucks now being used in Wisconsin but public fear of them must be overcome before they will be allowed, Wisconsin Transportation Secretary Norman Clapp said Tuesday.

"There is no question but that the double bottom operations, not only for milk, but for other industries, are more economical and flexible," he told the Wisconsin Federation of Co-operatives.

"The problem is one of public fear. The public must be educated to the advantages and have some good experiences (with them on highways)."

Wisconsin now limits trucks to 55 feet in length and 73,000 pounds. Trucking interest have urged raising these limits to 65 feet and 90,000 pounds, such as those now in effect in about 35 other states.

Delegates to the co-op convention urged the legislature to allow use of twin trailers to transport milk from farm to plant and between plants.

"This action is essential so milk may be moved effectively, fuel may be saved, quality assured and pollution problems reduced," he said.

Courts

Carl D. Dall, 29, 115 Oak St., Brillion, was charged Tuesday with marijuana possession and theft by fraud. His case was assigned to the public defender and continued to Friday by Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

Dall was arrested on the drug charge last Friday at a Lawrence University fraternity house, where police said he was smoking on part of a marijuana cigarette when they served him with a warrant on the other charge.

The theft by fraud charge related to an Oct. 2 incident, in which he reportedly walked out of the Peasant Shop, 109 N. Durkee St., after failing to pay for a leather coat with a retail value of $140.

Mark Stafford, 18, 714 W. Commercial St., pleaded guilty Tuesday to furnishing beer to two minors, ages 14 and 15, at the parking lot of a north side grocery store Aug. 23.

Sentencing was scheduled for Friday by Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

Two persons were fined $200 each Tuesday for county ordinance violations for disorderly conduct. The charges were reduced from criminal damage to property according to a plea bargain, in which the two agreed to make restitution prior to disposition of the case.

Outagamie County Judge Nick F. Schaefer ordered the fines for David A. Pepper, 18, 642 W. Parkway Blvd., and Michael Bablick, 20, 2300 N. Superior St.

The two were accused of breaking the antennas off 10 vehicles near a north side Appleton tavern Oct. 30.

A March 27 trial was scheduled Tuesday for Curtis J. Mankovecky, 21, 208½ Maple St., Kaukauna, for being party to disorderly conduct.

The defendant reportedly was one of two persons in a car which approached another vehicle at College Avenue and Memorial Drive in Appleton Sept. 23. There, the defendant pointed what appeared to be a pistol at the driver of an adjacent car, according to the complaint.

Authorities said the pistol later turned out to be a toy cap gun.

The trial date was set by Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

Janet L. Wiesler, 21, 1448 Winneconne Ave., Neenah, was fined $100 Tuesday for a county ordinance violation for disorderly conduct, amended from obstructing police.

The woman reportedly interfered when officers attempted to arrest a man in Appleton late Oct. 27.

The fine was ordered by Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

Thomas J. Kelly, 31, 624 First St., Menasha, was charged Tuesday with the theft of numerous articles valued together at more than $100 from the garage of the Thomas J. Stoeger residence, 917 S. Theodore St., July 27 or 28. The case was continued to Monday by Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

Missing from the incident were carpet-laying tools, a carpet stretcher, an electric tacker, a stapler, a propane torch kit, two tennis racquets and their wooden frame presses.

Energy plan presented

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Energy Administration has sent President Ford a long menu of policy choices for reducing U.S. dependence on foreign oil, but the featured listings are conservation measures like extra gasoline taxes and restrictions on downtown parking.

The 780-page "Project Independence" report published Tuesday by the FEA had been ordered by former President Richard M. Nixon who said it should be a "blueprint" for the United States to achieve independence from imported oil by 1980.

However, the study later was downgraded to an "option paper" and it concludes that complete oil independence by 1980 is neither possible nor desirable.

As expected the report drew mixed reviews.

Interior Secretary Rogers C.B. Morton said the report "is an excellent beginning" on a national energy policy. Morton forced the ouster of FEA Administrator John C. Sawhill, who oversaw the compilation of the study.

"Sound conservation practices will be combined with programs of research and development to provide the American people with a sound energy base during the decade ahead," Morton said.

Thirteen citizen groups called it a "positive — though faltering — first step," while the National Coal Association termed it a "flawed document" that gives short shrift to coal.

The study's suggestions on extra gasoline taxes and downtown parking restrictions theoretically would reduce gasoline consumption and make mass transit more attractive.

President Ford earlier this year rejected higher gasoline taxes, although some members of his administration support such a move.

Reduced energy demand was one of three main strategies for lessening oil imports by 1985, the others being an acceleration of domestic fuel production and creation of oil stockpiles for protection against international blackmail by oil exporting countries.

The report offered no recommendations, leaving that up to Morton as chairman of the President's cabinet-level Energy Resources Council.

In characterizing the report, Sawhill emphasized the conservation aspects of the study's work.

"The reality we have found is a strong and definite need for energy conservation, particularly over the next few years as we work to develop new energy supplies," he said.

Other fuel-saving possibilities included in the report were:

—A mandatory standard for 20-miles-per-gallon automobile performance.

—A 25 per cent tax credit for insulating existing homes.

—Heating and cooling standards, lighting standards, and a 15 per cent energy-improvement investment credit for commercial buildings.

—Efficiency standards for appliances.

—Industrial conservation, supported by research programs.

—Projects to demonstrate and promote energy conservation standards for power plants.

The report said energy conservation could quickly reduce dependence on oil imports and the dollar-drain; ease inflation; stretch domestic oil and gas supplies; and make other policy decisions more reliable.

It said accelerated fuel production, mainly by oil and gas drilling in new offshore areas and the Naval Petroleum Reserves, would create environmental problems, and massive regional development; and it is "a gamble on as yet unproved reserves of oil and gas," which might be limited by shortages of materials and equipment, the report warned.

It said standby storage of huge amounts of oil could protect the nation against a sudden interruption of imports, like last winter's Arab oil embargo.

But it said storage preparations would take a few years, providing no protection during that critical period; would cost the nation billions of dollars to stockpile imported oil at high prices; and would risk the loss of more billions of dollars if the world oil price later dropped.

All the same, the report said elements of all three strategies probably would be used in a broad energy policy.

In London, meanwhile, the British government announced Tuesday that it was tripling the tax on gasoline to discourage wasteful use of energy. The tax will jump from 8 to 25 per cent, or roughly from $1.06 to $1.20 for an American-sized gallon.

Morton said there will be public hearings on national energy policy in December, and the Energy Resources Council would pick out the main policy options for submission to President Ford.

"Our goal," said Morton, "is to submit a document to the President by the end of the year for his review and for possible proposals to Congress."

The 13 citizen groups, basing their comments on an earlier but similar draft of the report, criticized it on six counts, claiming that:

—Its analysis of social and environmental impacts was inadequate.

—It lacked a study of the energy industry's market structure.

—Its cost estimates were too uncertain.

—Its energy conservation suggestions did not go far enough.

—Its data were unreliable.

—And it underestimated the potential growth of solar, geothermal and other new energy sources.

The critique was issued by the Center for Science in the Public Interest; Natural Resources Defense Council; National Intervenors; Friends of the Earth; Corporate Accountability Research Group; National Consumers Congress; National Vista Alliance; Consumer Federation of America; Movement for Economic Justice; Environmental Action; Rafe Pomerance of the Urban Environment Conference; the Sierra Club; and the Environmental Policy Center.
